

THE Morning Star-Telegram presents here the sixth and last of a series of pictures in the life of Rogers, from boyhood days in military school until his death on Alaskan tundra.

WILL ROGERS' LIFE AS SEEN BY THE CAMERA

A SMILING farewell—His final interview—Rogers and Post at their last stop—Rogers family cemetery at Chelsea, Okla., where the body will be taken later.

His famous grin much in evidence, Will Rogers is shown with Miss Helen Hawkins, air line stewardess, as he took off at San Francisco for Seattle, where the humorist met Wiley Post for their ill-fated flight to Alaska. It ended in a crash near Fort Barrow, Alaska, Aug. 16.

His last interview was given when Rogers stopped at Fairbanks, Alaska, on the way to Point Barrow. Left to right are Bernie Stone, editor of Fairbanks Daily News-Miner, Rogers and Joe Crosson, the Alaska pilot who flew the bodies back.

Will Rogers and Wiley Post are shown on their plane as they landed at Fairbanks on their leisurely tour that ended in death. In just a few hours they left on the final takeoff.

Here is where the body of Rogers will finally rest. It is the family burial ground at Chelsea, Okla., where his father and mother are buried. The widow has announced that the body will be removed from Forest Lawn Memorial Park at Glendale, Cal., in about a month.
