

Cotton has been some better price this week. The elections in the East have caused this.

War brings prosperity, but it seems that troubled Europe is not helping the old U. S. A. much.

Poor old Florida! She has had her third disastrous storm this season.

The Centennial at Dallas next year will help all of Texas. Nocona, as the great leather goods center, is bound to get recognition from the millions of visitors.

We welcome The Mission Times to our exchange table, published at Mission, Texas. This is one of the best weekly papers that is published in South Texas.

Now, payment of rent is causing a hardship on good people who meet their obligations in this section. Rent houses are scarce now, and they are going to be scarcer, because people are not going to put their money into rent property, when people who rent homes are so unreliable.

Texas loved Will Rogers. His memory will always live in the heart of every true Texan. There is another man in this state whose name will ever be associated with Rogers. They were true great friends. This man is Amon G. Carter.

Al Smith seems to be holding his own in New York. His position was absolutely indicated in Tuesday's election.

The prospects now are that there will be some independent thinking in national and state politics next year. The masses have gotten filled up on government trying to run private business.

All Texas will be glad to welcome President Roosevelt to the Texas Centennial. He is a great and good man and has done his part in trying to bring relief during the depression.

Alabama has a game law that is effective. A man killed wild turkey hen out of season in that state and he paid a $30 fine. The result, they have wild turkey in Alabama.

The Press is pleased to know that a majority of the business people of this city indorse the stand that this paper has taken in contemplating that too many papers is a burden on our business people. The publisher of The Press is absolutely sincere in contending for the best interests of Nocona. Nearly forty years ago he commenced to publish his paper in Nocona. Our little city had nothing but swaddling clothes on then, but as the years rolled by we have stayed with the home town; and a record of these many years proves that our position has ever been for the best interests of Nocona, and our contention is that the thing should not be overdone now.

The Press would suggest to the newspapers of Montague County that they are losing the most useful and effective way of doing something worth while by not having an editorial page. We are not taking the position to advise, for the weekly papers of this county are well edited, and just as capable as any papers, but we believe they should stand for something, and the editorial policy of a weekly paper unifies that fact.
