

Courses which would fit the needs of certain students are often overlooked by them because they are not made aware of its scope and purpose. This is especially true of new elective courses.

Teachers having such courses are invited to make a brief announcement of them and send them in to Dean Hall. These will be combined into some sort of unity, and worked out in an announcement to the students.

This will be different from "boosting" one's own department or courses. It will not be a matter of soliciting but rather informing the students. (Dean Hall).
