

June 30, 1937.

Mr. Morton R. Harrison,
Hotel Will Rogers,
Claremore, Okla.

Dear Mr. Harrison:

Upon receipt of your letter of June 29th, I made a search of the office and found your letter of May 14th in an accumulation of mail Mr. Carter had not had an opportunity to even read. The writer was out of the office ill at the time your first letter arrived and during Mr. Carter's absence from the city. Since my return to the office there has been such an accumulation of correspondence to handle and Mr. Carter has been in and out of the city so many times that I doubt he has seen it. He is out of the city now, although he is expected home the latter part of this week, and your letters shall be brought to his attention.

I hope you don't feel the delay in acknowledging your letter is in any way an indication that Mr. Carter is not interested in the subject matter of your letter, which is not the case. It is simply a matter of there not being enough hours in a day to do all the things he is called upon to do - all of which he attempts and as a result of which he neglects his personal correspondence and business.

Yours very truly,

Secy. to Mr. Carter.
