Dear Mr. Carter:

Miss Sallie Gillespie tells me that you want to leave the statue of Will Rogers on his horse here in the library. That's a good idea. We'll appreciate having him around. About next August when sensible folks are out in the country and only a few of us are in here enjoying the weather, I'll be pointing him out to some bedraggled visitor. And you can see him smiling and thinking what he used to say: "Ain't it the limit what a fool a man will make out of himself for culture?"

Thanks for letting him stay here. We need him.

Sincerely yours,
