I was at a dinner party the other night at which there was a famous composer, opera singer and artist and several other equally intelligent people—all refugees from Germany's Hitler. The topic of conversation was Albert Basserman, 72-year-old German actor who made such a sensational success in the "Dr. Ehrlich" picture. They all regretted so much that he had asked for his release on his Warner contract. Basserman, who was one of Germany's outstanding actors, was unwilling to work without his wife.
