

BROWN

In World War No. I, four young men of our immediate family were in the army, Leon Brown, a cousin, in the Navy. There may have been others, but I know of these five.

David Hubbard saw much service on the front. Being such a good shot, this Texas boy, who had hunted all his life, was made a sharpshooter, and put in very dangerous positions, in trees or what have you, from which he picked off many a German, I hope.
