Dear Mrs. Deakins:

As I wrote you some time ago, I am writing a biography of the late Paul Whiteman. I have now entered the year 1936 and have at hand considerable information on his participation in the Texas Centennial Celebration.

Through the years, Paul had often spoken of Amon Carter; in addition, the Fort Worth press clippings I have often refer to him. However, it is apparent that the Fort Worth newspaper reporters assumed that everyone knew who Amon Carter was, with the result that I can't find a single reference to his business activities.

Could I impose upon you to supply me with Xerox copies of a brief biographical sketch or "Who's Who" listing of the late Mr. Carter? If you have any other items which you feel might be of interest, I'd appreciate Xerox copies of those, too. I will be glad to reimburse you for any costs involved.

A stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed for your convenience. If you or others of your staff are unable to give me this information, I'd appreciate a brief note informing me as to another possible source.

Thank you,

Glenhall Taylor
