

O-----h! There was an old hen who had a wooden leg;
The best old hen that ever laid an egg -
The best old hen of any on the farm -
Do you think a little drink would do us any harm?

O-----h! There was an old man with whiskers on his chin;
Who never learned to work 'cause he never did begin;
He wouldn't draw the water and he didn't cut the wood -
Another little drink would do us lots of good.

O-----h! There was a little girl, the sweetest to be found;
The dearest little girl that ever came around;
She always would accept when invited out to dine -
With another little drink we'd be feeling mighty fine.

O-----h! There was an old rooster with a big red comb;
You couldn't make him stop and you couldn't send him home,
He never got enough and he never would quit -
Another little drink wouldn't hurt a little bit.

O-----h! There was a smiling mixer who stood behind the bar -
We might as well be full as be feeling as we are -
He always drank cold water so he never had a souse -
We'll have another drink, but we'll have it - on the house.
