18 TAKE PART IN EXPANDED PROGRAM

Eighteen TCU students will spend 1994 studying and working in the heart of London as part of a new, expanded version of the University's internship program with Regent's College. This year two different groups of students — one in spring and one in fall — are participating. Previously, students enrolled only for the spring semester.

Some 24 students took part in the program from 1991 to 1993. Those students were in London from late January through mid-May, each working three days per week in an internship that earned nine hours of TCU credit. They also took two Regent's College courses for another six to eight credit hours.

In the expanded program, students may sign up for the same nine hours of internship plus six to eight hours of courses. Students also may choose to take six hours of internship combined with nine to 12 hours of classes. Another option is to forgo the internship and take 15 to 18 hours of academic courses.

The seven spring semester participants include two seniors — Christina Barnes, a journalism/history major, and Michelle Newton, a radio-TV-film/political science major — who are working at CBS News' London Bureau. Two seniors also will work for Sir John Wheeler, the Minister of State for Northern Ireland. They are Tracy Lamb, a political science major, and Michelle Wisdom, a geology/political science major.

Also participating this spring are Auphoncei Man, a senior advertising/public relations major working for the Munroe and Forster public relations firm; Philip Martin Kanayan, a junior history/political science major, assigned to the House of Commons; and Elizabeth Hudson, a senior social work major who is exploring her field at the Boetliger and Algate social services agency.

Eleven students and an alternate signed up for the 1994 fall semester. They are Kirsten Leigh Barron and Laura Marie Boyd, both sophomore radio-TV-film majors; junior Laura Gauldin and sophomore Kerri Ann Morgan, psychology majors; and Susan Friedman, a sophomore fashion merchandising major. Other juniors who plan to participate in the fall program include business majors Cindy Witt and Wade Wegner, history major Jennifer Nicole Johnson, finance major Robert Hussman, advertising/public relations major Kathleen Chapman and alternate Beth Billeck, an accounting/finance major. Also participating is political science major Julie Hardin, a senior.

Larry Adams, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs, hailed the expanded program as "an increased opportunity for TCU students to engage in an international educational experience. Both London and Regent's College, which draws a large number of students from the European community, provide ideal settings for such study."

JUST A REMINDER...

...of today's (Tuesday) lecture on "Television and Politics in A Clever Age" by Dr. Roderick Hart, Green Honors Professor in speech communication, at 3 p.m. in Moudy 141 N.

...that the next issue of the Weekly Bulletin will be March 29.

CREATION WILL BE SPEAKER'S TOPIC

A scientist's view of creation from both religious and scientific perspectives will be discussed by Dr. John A. Moore, emeritus professor of biology at the University of California at Riverside, during his Wednesday-Friday visit as Green Honors Professor hosted by the biology department.

"Creation I: The Religious Paradigm" will be Moore's topic for a public presentation tomorrow (Wednesday). The free event will begin at 7 p.m. in the Sid Richardson Building's Lecture Hall 1. "Creation II: The Scientific Paradigm" will be his topic for a public lecture Thursday. The program will begin at 7 p.m. in the Sid Richardson Building's Lecture Hall 2.

"Reforming the Teaching of the Sciences" will be Moore's topic Friday for a biology seminar, beginning at noon in Lecture Hall 3. It also will be open to the public.

Since 1983 Moore has been a major force behind the "Science as a Way of Knowing" project which grounds students in the the basics of biology by describing how thinkers and scientists since Aristotle have framed, approached and answered basic questions about life. Co-sponsored by leading scientific organizations, it is a project of the Committee on Education of the American Society of Zoologists.

The project's textbook has been described as "a marvelous, lively account of the history of modern biology" by Bruce Albers of the University of California at San Francisco. "Here is the conceptual history of biology as a lively narrative of insights and discoveries that count," said Francisco J. Ayala of the University of California at Irvine.

"No one else could have done such a masterful job of portraying biology so cogently," according to F. James Rutherford, chief education officer of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Moore, a University of California professor of biology for 16 years before being named emeritus professor, served on the Coordination Council for Education in 1991-94. He has been a member of the National Academy of Sciences since 1976, serving as vice chairman of a U.S. delegation to general assemblies in both Bangalore, India and Helsinki, Finland.

Moore, author of numerous textbooks in genetics and development, has been training biology instructors for more than 20 years. "No one is better qualified to provide the reader with such knowledge than John A. Moore, distinguished as an educator and admired for the vastness of his knowledge in all branches of biology," said Ernst Mayr of Harvard University.

A Fulbright Research Scholar at Australia's Sydney University, he was a Guggenheim Fellow in 1959-60 and was a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1960. He has been a member of the National Academy of Sciences since 1963. His awards include those from the American Society of Zoologists for "his major contributions to the improvement of science education as exemplified by the conception and development of the Science as a Way of Knowing program" as well as a Sigma Xi special award for the project. He received the first teacher exemplar award from the Society of College Science Teachers. In 1990 the American Society of Zoologists honored him by establishing the John A. Moore Lectureship in Science Education. Moore has served on the editorial board of such publications as American Zoologist, Ecology and Journal of Morphology.

Earlier in his career Moore was a faculty member at Barnard College and Columbia University, where he had earned three degrees. He is author of more than 250 published works.

Nine new school records were set and Walter Soza qualified for the NCAA National Championship Meet during the recent Southwest Conference meet held in Austin. The men's swimming and diving team finished fourth with 485 points behind Texas with 1056, A&M with 713 and Southern Methodist with 710.

"We had a great meet and have Walter Soza entered in the NCAA championships in Minneapolis March 24-26," said Coach Richard Sybesma. "He will be entered in three individual events and has an outstanding opportunity to score there. We were pleased to set nine new records and had some very fast swims by our team," the coach added.

Divers Leah Springstead, Cleigh Pascoe and David Doggett are going with Coach Chip Weiss to Oklahoma City this week for the NCAA zone qualifying meet.

GALLERY FEATURES INFANTINO WORKS

Justine's Milam Gallery opened a new show March 11 with Stephen Infantino, modern languages and literatures, among the four featured artists. His paintings will remain on view at the Dallas gallery through April 2.

The exhibition also includes ceramic murals by J. Wade Meeker of Fort Worth and works by two Dallas-based artists — a mix of "pure colorful abstract and representational work," gallery owner Justine Andreason-Yeager noted.

Viewing hours are noon-5:30 p.m. weekdays, noon-4 p.m. Saturdays or by appointment at (214) 821-9045. The gallery is located at 5224 Milam St., off Henderson Avenue, two blocks east of Central Expressway and directly behind Alamo Glass.

LITERATURE TO BE SEMINAR TOPIC

"But Is It Literature? The Debate Between Storytelling and Literary Fiction in Western American Literature" is the topic for the 17th Annual TCU/Chisholm Trail Western Seminar scheduled April 9 on campus. The program is co-sponsored by the Office of Extended Education, the TCU Press and Chisholm Trail Round-Up Inc.

Debate about western literature — what it is and isn't — has raged for years. Popular western novelists feel shunned by reviewers, some publishers and all teachers. This seminar will bring an established western novelist, an author who writes western series under house names, a teacher of creative writing together with history and literature professors in a lively exchange designed to examine the importance of fiction — all kinds of fiction — for those who are deeply interested in the history and literature of the American West.

Leading off the program will be Fred Erisman, who will discuss the traditional western novel. He will be followed by Jim Lee, director of the Center for Texas Studies, whose topic will be western literary fiction. E.A. (Tony) Mares of the history and English faculties at the University of North Texas will focus on the treatment of minorities in western fiction. The morning session will end with Lee interviewing novelist James Reasoner, who writes under a variety of pseudonyms and publishes 10 to 12 novels a year. Their talk will focus on house names, book packagers and the western series.

Following lunch, a dramatic reading of works by participating faculty will be presented by the Purple Pros(e), a readers' theater group of TCU students with training in oral interpretation under the direction of Donna Hall of the speech communication department.

The afternoon program will resume with a talk by award-winning Texas novelist Elmer Kelton, who began his career writing for pulp magazines and is today considered a major regional novelist. Also speaking will be novelist and short story writer C.W. Smith, who teaches creative writing at Southern Methodist University. His topic will be "Western Literature: Do We Know the Difference?"

Following the seminar will be a reception at the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History, where participants will be given an opportunity to view the exhibit, "Thundering Hooves, Five Centuries of Horse Power in the American West." Books by participating faculty and related books will be on sale at the reception.

Registration is limited, and early registration is advised. A $30 admission fee for the daylong seminar includes lunch; those choosing to have lunch on their own will pay only $22.50. Additional information is available from Judy Alter at the TCU Press, Ext. 7822.

BARBER, PUMMILL WILL PERFORM

Violinist Barbara Barber and pianist Janet Pummill will perform a concert on March 28 as part of the Faculty Music Series. The free, public concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

The concert will open with Beethoven's Sonata in E flat (Op. 12, No. 3.), the middle movement of which has been described as a "lovely bouquet, fragrant with gracious melody and luxuriant turns" Barbara will then play Chaconne, the last movement of Bach's Partita No. 2 in D Minor, which may have originated as an independent piece. Following an intermission, the pair will perform Josef Suk's Four Pieces for Violin and Piano (Op. 17), which will be followed by William Bolcom's "Graceful Ghost Rag." The concert will conclude with Pablo de Sarasate's arrangement of Ambroise Thomas' Gavotte from "Mignon," which includes some of Sarasate's own special violinistic surprises.

NOTES ON FOLKS

There's a definite TCU "flavor" to happenings at the Book Stop on S. Hulen St. this month, which has been declared Texas Writers Month by Gov. Ann Richards. Jim Corder (English) was there March 12 to talk about his Hunting Lieutenant Chadbourne, which is described as "a must for individuals intrigued with '...philosophical dilemmas posed by our ephemeral existence.'" Betsy Colquitt (English) will be a guest March 27 when she and Susan Ayres present an afternoon of poetry.

Alumna Marla Spikes was honored Feb. 11 as "an outstanding young leader" by the Fort Worth Jaycees at a dinner event at the Petroleum Club. Graduated through Harris College of Nursing in 1992, Marla initiated a Labor Companion volunteer group during her undergraduate studies. As a Registered Nurse at John Peter Smith Hospital, she has continued the program of volunteer assistance in women's and children's services there.

Two TCU-related people took part in the March 10 inauguration of Robert E. Shimp as the ninth president of McMurrur University. They were Jo Ann James, emeritus professor of education and former dean of women, who represented Syracuse University, and Dr. Chris D. Diebel of Abilene, TCU Class of '53 member and retired Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) minister, who represented his alma mater.

John Breyer (geology) and graduate student David Trice recently led an international contingent of geologists and petroleum engineers on a field trip along the bluffs of the Nueces River, south of Uvalde. The trip was sponsored by ARCO International Oil and Gas Co. and included an Englishman, two Scots, a Kuwaiti, a Malaysian and several Chinese participants. The strata exposed in the bluffs are similar to strata in the subsurface in a large oil-producing area in South China.

John moderated a conference session during a Feb. 29-March 2 symposium on Petroleum Systems of the Chinese Concession Blocks sponsored by the Earth Resources and Environment Center at the University of Texas at Arlington. The symposium, which featured speakers from the China National Oil and Gas Exploration and Development Co., was sponsored by 23 national and international oil companies.

Ana Isabel Rueda-Jenkins and Carolyn Durham (modern languages and literatures) participated in the International Conference of the Association of Academic Programs in Latin America and the Caribbean on Feb. 25 in San José, Costa Rica. In their presentation, "How a Foreign Language Department Can Meet the Challenge of Increased Trading Opportunities," they explained what business professionals can gain from studying a foreign culture and how this knowledge can maximize their success in taking advantage of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

During the Texas State Historical Association's 98th annual meeting March 3-5 in Austin, Judy Alter, who with Tracy Row represented TCU Press, was in the right city at the right time. A presidential reception was held in the restored "Custer House" — briefly the home of Elizabeth Bacon Custer, subject of Judy's new book, Libby. Stephen Hardin (history Ph.D. 1989, now at Victoria College) took part in the session "Texas Ranger Captains Reconsidered," presenting his paper on "'Valor, Wisdom, and Experience': Early Texas Ranger Captains and the Nature of Frontier Military Leadership." Juliet George (News Service) also presented a paper, "A Cedar Bridge: The Jewish-Gentile Partnership of De Cordova and Frazier, 1851-1856."

NOTES ON FOLKS

As a participant in the New Perspectives on Historical Imagery symposium at Agnes Scott College in Decatur, Ga., Mark Thistlethwaite (art and art history) delivered a paper titled "Renewal and Redescription: History Painting in a Postmodern Age." Mark also presented a lecture, "Barbara Kruger's Body Politic."

The Texas A&M Symphonic Band premiered "March Reveille," by Curt Wilson (music), Feb. 26 at the Morton H. Meyerson Symphony Center in Dallas. The march, commissioned for the Aggie Band's 100th anniversary, appears on their new anniversary CD.

Sheila Allen judged the final competition of the Dallas Opera Guild's Career Development Grant program held Saturday, March 5 at the Gooch Auditorium, Southwestern Medical Center. Her fellow judges were Plato Karayanis, general director of the Dallas Opera, and John Ardoin, music critic of the Dallas Morning News.

HONORS FACULTY WILL DEBATE

Five members of the honors program faculty will debate "American Democracy: Liberty for All or Tyranny of the Majority?" tomorrow (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the Faculty Center.

Audience participation is welcome at the annual debate, which is now in its second year. Participating faculty members will include John Harvey of economics, Kathryne McDorman of history, Richard Galvin of philosophy, Charles Lockhart of political science and Michael Katovich of sociology. Refreshments will be served.

STUDENTS TO VOLUNTEER IN TUCSON

Responding to Habitat for Humanity's "Collegiate Challenge" program of spring break service alternatives, a 10-member delegation from the University will help with construction and finishing of three houses in Tucson, Ariz., March 19-26.

Members of Chi Delta Mu religion studies fraternity organized the trip. Undergraduates Carolyn Allen, Susan Daniel, Rochelle Green, Darcey Gritzmacher, Clayton Holmes, Wendy McClung, Casey McDonald and Zephirin Ryan will be accompanied by recent graduate Robert Morris and Brite student Christopher Wilson.

TCU THEATRE IS BREESE'S TOPIC

"Theatre at TCU" will be the topic Thursday when Steven Breese, assistant professor of acting and directing, speaks at this month's University staff luncheon. The event will begin at noon in the Student Center's Woodson Room.

Due today (Tuesday), the $5.75-per-person reservations go to Diane Crane, Box 32920.
