IBR TEAM WILL ASSESS PRISON PROGRAM

A Texas in-prison substance abuse treatment facility, visited in January by U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno and Texas Gov. Ann Richards, will be assessed over the next 18 months by a team from the University's Institute of Behavioral Research.

The IBR has been involved with the evaluation of criminal justice treatment programs since 1991 when Dwayne Simpson, institute director, and Kevin Knight, associate research scientist, were asked to develop and implement an evaluation plan for treatment interventions used by the Tarrant County Substance Abuse Treatment Facility's 140-bed program for non-violent drug offenders located in Mansfield.

In collaboration with the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse (TCADA) and the Texas Criminal Justice Department, four IBR specialists will evaluate the effectiveness of the 500-bed New Vision Chemical Dependency Treatment Center in an in-prison therapeutic community in Kyle.

Dwayne will serve as principal investigator with Kevin as project manager. Lois Chatham, IBR senior research scientist, will direct follow-up activities, and Mabel Camacho, associate research scientist for the institute, will assist with data management and analysis.

New Vision and the Texas Criminal Justice Initiative encompassing it drew praise from Reno during her recent tour of the facility. Quoted in TCADA's New Vision newsletter, she said: "We know that if we let addicted inmates back on the streets they become involved again in their addictions. This facility is a valuable tool in trying to teach them how to live." She indicated to commission staff members that she would take information she had gathered at Kyle and share it with the director of federal prisons for adaptation in other settings.

Lee Brown, director of the Clinton Administration's Office of National Drug Control Policy, also has called the Texas program a model for substance abuse treatment within the criminal justice system.

The IBR team will collect in-treatment and follow-up data on approximately 300 Texas parolees with substance abuse histories and compare outcomes of those who participated in a nine-month in-prison treatment program with those of non-participants. TCADA Secretary Michael S. Hull has described IBR's task as "the most exhaustive follow-up of program graduates to date."

The facility at Kyle is one of seven planned for Texas over the next two years to fulfill a portion of the state's multi-tiered approach for treating prisoners with drug and alcohol problems. In addition to therapeutic communities behind prison walls, the initiative also establishes other approaches, such as treatment in lieu of prison for non-violent first-time offenders. Residential halfway houses and outpatient treatment programs with monitored recovery also have been established to help reintegrate prison treatment graduates back into the community. The initiative calls for Texas to have 14,000 treatment slots in the criminal justice system by 1995 for offenders with substance abuse problems.

"The Texas Initiative is expected to have a long-term, national impact on how society will deal with drugs and crime," Dwayne noted. "This study is part of the scientific evaluation work that will help guide future policy and funding decisions. IBR is proud to be in the forefront of research on the key drug abuse treatment issue facing our nation."

SOCIAL WORK STUDENTS HONORED

The social work program faculty members and students hosted the second annual field instructors' tea April 12 in the Student Center Woodson Room. According to assistant professor Tracy Dietz, the gathering was designed "to show appreciation for agency-based field instructors who provide supervision to senior social work students doing their field placements in local agencies." Approximately 40 students, area social workers and teachers attended. Social work student Susan Lucas helped plan the event.

Students Trisha Worlow and Julie Martin shared "social work student of the year" honors. Trisha, who works with the pregnant and parenting teens program at Birdville Independent School District's Shannon Learning Center, was nominated by Taresa Lucas, a social work graduate who is the school social worker at Shannon, and by Dianne Nixon. Julie, who provides case management and other services to patients and clients of the AIDS Outreach Center, was nominated by Kathleen Holzaepfle and Cathy Cogan. Cogan, in turn, received the award for "outstanding agency-based social work field instructor" based on student nominations.

CENTER NEEDS VOLUNTEERS

Volunteers are needed by the Funding Information Center, a non-profit grant library located in TCU's library. According to Joan Scott, the center director community relations, duties would include packet preparation, data entry, some telephone work, library organization and various other clerical tasks. Hours are flexible.

Interested individuals should contact Joan at Ext. 7664.

FINANCE SCHOLAR WILL BE GUEST

Dr. Eduardo S. Schwartz, considered one of the foremost scholars worldwide in the area of contingent claims and real options, will be a guest of the finance department Thursday and Friday.

During his visit in the endowed position of Green Honors Professor, Schwartz will give a free, public lecture on "Financing Engineering." The 3:30 p.m. event Thursday will be in the Tandy Hall boardroom.

A professor of real estate and finance and holder of an endowed position in the Anderson Graduate School of Management at the University of California at Los Angeles, Schwartz has an international reputation as a consultant. He has worked with Citicorp, American Express, Merrill Lynch Asset Markets, British Petroleum, Wells Fargo Investment Advisors, Empresa Nacional de Petróleo in Chile and others.

Schwartz, who held an endowed position at the University of British Columbia before joining the UCLA faculty, is associate editor of 11 journals, including the Journal of Finance and the Journal of Financial Economics. He has received numerous awards for both teaching and research.

A native of Chile, Schwartz is author of more than 50 articles in leading finance journals as well as two research monographs and 12 research chapters in various books.

Holder of master's and doctoral degrees in business administration from the University of British Columbia, Schwartz also earned a degree in industrial engineering from the University of Chile.

"Valuing Risky Debt: A New Approach" will be Schwartz's topic Wednesday for his 10 a.m. seminar with faculty members. At 1:30 p.m., he will talk about "Strategic Asset Allocation" before faculty members. Both will be in the Tandy Hall boardroom.

SCHOOL TO RECOGNIZE EXCELLENCE

Outstanding student leaders from the School of Education will be among those recognized at an awards reception tomorrow (Wednesday) in the Student Center Woodson Room.

The reception, which is held for all student teachers and their cooperating teachers, will begin at 5:30 p.m. The School of Education Alumni Association is sponsoring the event, which will include presentation of the Excellence in Education Award.

LATIN AMERICAN STUDENTS PLAN FIESTA

For the sake of cultural exchange and fun, the Organization of Latin American Students (OLAS) will host Fiesta Day from noon to 3:30 p.m. Thursday on the lawn area near Frog Fountain. "We basically want students, faculty and staff members — everybody — to come out and experience a little Latin culture," said Gaby García, OLAS president.

Attractions will include performances of Tejano music by a band from Diamond Hill-Jarvis High School, dancing, recorded music announced by disc jockey Edward García and a prop-and-costume photography booth.

Just as the high school musicians will contribute to cultural awareness on campus, Gaby noted, "we will give them a taste of college." She also indicated that students from Starpoint School will be included in the festivities.

OLAS members also have planned a lotería game, the breaking of piñatas by Starpoint students and a "jumping Latin bean" sack race. Culinary delights will range from free burritos to a jalapeño-eating contest.

TCU IN THE NEWS

Pianist Rubén Torres (M.M. 1979) profiled on the "Artes" page of the Star-Telegram's April 8 La Estrella section, discussed the formation of his quartet Amistad a decade ago and his efforts to advance the awareness of Latin American composers' contributions to classical music. In Maria F. Durand's article, "Compositor latino sobresale en la música clásica," he noted that he has collected more than 100 works for the group's repertoire. The Star-Telegram feature appeared in advance of Amistad's April 14 performance at the Palace Theatre in Grapevine.

Several music faculty members, students and former students have numbered among Amistad personnel during its first 10 years. The original quartet featured Arden Hopkin, Jerry Brown and Chris Chapin with Rubén. Other Amistad musicians have included Cynthia Folio, Kenneth Schanewerk, Janis Grannell, John Salmon, Rebecca Ross and John Burton. Alumna Karen Fontenot-Earnest currently performs with the group. Rubén, a native of Peru, studied in Buenos Aires, Argentina, at the Instituto Superior de Teología and the school of music within Teatro Colón, before coming to the United States in 1977.

Graduate student Carlos Eliseo Cuéllar (history) and his Fort Worth Hispanic oral history project received recognition in an illustrated feature appearing in the April 15 La Estrella section of the Star-Telegram. "History has consistently forgotten these people," Carlos told reporter Maria Durand. "I want to correct that." Also acknowledged in the story was William Beezley (history), who with Carlos made a presentation to Proyecto Adelante, an immigrant-advocacy organization, on the historic contribution to local economy by Mexican immigrants and their descendants. Carlos welcomes assistance in contacting people who moved from Mexico to Fort Worth during the 1920s, as well as their relatives.

On the one-year anniversary of the destruction of the Branch Davidian complex near Waco, Ron Flowers (religion) was quoted extensively in the Waco Tribune regarding the religious group and the tragic demise of its followers. Ron was one of several speakers at a "Day of Information" April 17 at Mount Carmel, speaking on the interpretation of the free exercise of religion clause of the First Amendment and on the need to preserve religious liberty.

A joint project between the School of Education, the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History and local school districts, received air time on Channel 8's March 25 evening newscast.

JUST A REMINDER . . .

... that performances of Tennessee Williams' "The Rose Tattoo," directed by George Brown, are at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday and at 2 p.m. May 1. TCU students and students and faculty members are admitted free of charge. Tickets for others are $3 and $5. Reservations can be made by calling Ext. 7626.

... on May 2 the 125-member Choral Union, featured in a Carnegie Hall performance last December, will close the concert season with a presentation of two movements from Franz Schubert's Mass in E flat with the TCU Symphony Orchestra. The free, public concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

FACULTY ASSEMBLY IS THURSDAY

Issues of concern to faculty members that were identified by the standing committees of the Faculty Senate will be discussed by Provost/Vice Chancellor Bill Koehler on Thursday during a Faculty Assembly. The use and abuse of departmental supply lines for purchasing equipment and several matters related to promotion and tenure will be included in the discussion.

To begin at 3:30 p.m. in Moudy Building 141 N., the meeting will follow a question-and-answer format and will allow questions and comments to be directed to Dr. Koehler from the floor. John Breyer, Faculty Senate chair, will moderate the discussion.

EVENT TO SHOWCASE STUDENT TALENT

Four student dancer/choreographers will present their works at the Department of Ballet and Modern Dance's Senior Studio performances May 3-4. Both performances are at 8 p.m. in the Ballet and Modern Dance Building's Studio Theatre and are free and open to the public.

The performances were originally scheduled for Friday and Saturday but were delayed because several students were asked to Washington, D.C., to perform a dance work choreographed by graduate student Terrie West Poore. The piece, which earned Terrie the South Central Region Dance Magazine Choreographer's Award, will be performed at the National American College Dance Festival at the Kennedy Center on Saturday.

The senior studio performances will include both ballet and modern dance works. Student choreographers will include seniors Laura Hiszczynskyj and Kristin Houck-Langford, graduate student Michelle Tyer Haberle and Heather Hutton Coomer, who is not seeking a degree. Dance faculty member Susan Douglas Roberts will direct a modern dance movement piece that she choreographed with the five repertory class members who will perform it.

RECEPTION WILL HONOR FARRAR

The religion department will host a reception on May 2 honoring Jim Farrar, associate professor of religion, for his 37 years of service to TCU. The event, open to all faculty and staff members, will take place in the Faculty Center from 4 to 6 p.m.

CHEMIST TO DISCUSS SYNTHESIS

Dr. A. Ian Scott of the Texas A&M University chemistry department faculty will present a lecture at 11 a.m. today (Tuesday) on "Genetically Engineered Synthesis of Natural Products." Interested faculty and staff members as well as students are welcome to attend the talk in Sid Richardson Lecture Hall 4. Scott's visit is sponsored by the chemistry department and hosted by David Gutsche.

TCU PARTNERSHIPS PRAISED

TCU's Neeley School of Business and the Office of Student Activities have been cited by the Fort Worth Independent School District for their outstanding high school partnerships in the Adopt-A-School program.

Cash awards funded by the Miller Brewing Company were presented to TCU's high school partners during a recognition dinner last week. The Neeley School's Polytechnic High School received a $500 award, and Student Activities' O.D. Wyatt High School was presented with $250. The schools are free to determine how the money can best benefit their students.

Developed in 1982, the Adopt-A-School program sought to bring together educators and professionals from the business community to enrich the education of Fort Worth children. During the 1993-94 academic year, more than 230 businesses and other organizations have shared their resources with 72,000 Fort Worth ISD students. The two TCU groups were among 10 organizations cited.

Student leaders from the University have spent many hours sharing the popular leadership training classes offered at TCU with Wyatt high school students this academic year in a program called "Because We Care." Organized by Student Activities Director Suzy Batchelor, the Adopt-A-School arrangement has been staffed for the last two years by Monica Mendez-Grant, program and minority student advisor, and coordinated by student Deidra Crawford. The Wyatt partnership has involved more than 60 TCU student volunteers.

"Student leaders at TCU and Wyatt are paired in this partnership that helps students learn, share, and practice effective leadership skills in such areas as conflict management, time management, and decision-making," Fort Worth ISD awards committee members noted.

The Neeley School participated in numerous activities to help Polytechnic students become more comfortable in a university setting. In addition to a fall retreat, executive breakfasts with top Tarrant County leaders and classroom visits on the TCU campus, Neeley M.B.A.s coached high school students participating in the AT&T Collegiate Stock Challenge. The Polytechnic students placed in the top 10 percent of 400 teams competing in the AT&T contest. TCU graduate consultants also coached students for competition in Future Business Leaders of America contests. The contestants placed in the top 10 percent in each of two meets. The Neeley School has participated in Adopt-A-School since 1990. The program is currently overseen by Assistant Dean Jan Titsworth.

NOTES ON FOLKS

"The Way to Carnegie Hall: Advice from 20th-Century Brass Soloists" was the title of a paper read by Michael Meckna (music) at the annual meeting of the College Music Society's South Central chapter on April 15 at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. On April 4 he read "Sacred and Secular America: Virgil Thomson's Symphony on a Hymn Tune" at the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Judy Alter (TCU Press) was featured as a "Rising Lone Star" at the Texas Library Association annual meeting in Corpus Christi. Judy spoke on why she writes juvenile fiction about Texas and the American West.

Don Palmer was recognized for his work as architect of record for the Chan Shun Centennial Library on the campus of Southwestern Adventist College at Keene during April dedication ceremonies. This new three-story, 33,000-square-foot library celebrates the 100th anniversary of the college.

Mike Sacken (educational foundations and administration) delivered a paper on the dismissal of school administrators at the annual meeting of the American Educational Researchers Association held April 5 in New Orleans.

Joe Law (William L. Adams Writing Center) has been elected South Central regional representative to the National Writing Centers Association. His term will run from 1994-97. He also has been appointed to the NWCA task force that will investigate the possibilities and implications of accrediting writing centers and tutor-training programs.

The Gateway Music Festival in Dallas and the University of New Mexico Jazz Festival in Albuquerque were two of the April judging events for Curt Wilson (music). Friday and Saturday he will judge at the Six Flags Music Festival in Arlington.

In addition to rehearsing for upcoming recording sessions and a new CD that will be produced this summer, the TCU Jazz Ensemble performed for Bell Helicopter at the Round Up Inn on April 25 and is preparing for a concert at the Radisson Hotel on May 1.

Emeritus professor Paul Boller, novelist Tom Wolfe and others spoke at an April 8-10 reunion at Yale University's Graduate School for graduates of its American Studies Program. Yale was the first to offer a doctorate in the interdisciplinary field of American Studies. Paul spoke of his experiences in the program.

Funeral services were conducted recently in San Antonio for Marjorie Moore, emeritus assistant professor of communication pathology who died in mid-March. On the faculty at Gallaudet College and Columbia University before joining the TCU faculty in 1961, she also had been supervisor of the University's program for the deaf. She retired in 1976.

Sympathy is extended to Betty Taylor (education) on the death of her mother, Lila J. Fuhrer, who died April 16 in a Fort Worth hospital. She had been a Fort Worth resident since 1951. Funeral services were held April 19 at Greenwood Chapel, and burial was in Greenwood Memorial Park.

Diana Shaffer (English graduate student), has been offered admission and a tuition grant to the School of Criticism and Theory at Dartmouth College for the summer. She will participate in seminars taught by Christopher Norris, Naomi Schor, Elaine Showalter, Stanley Fish, Peter Brooks and Geoffrey Hartman.

NOTES ON FOLKS

The history department was represented by several people at the Southwestern Social Science Association's annual meeting in San Antonio March 30-April 2. TCU graduate student participants outnumbered those from any other any institution. Bill Beezley and Grady McWhiney chaired sessions; Ben Procter organized 25 sessions involving 144 participants. Graduate students Shannon Baker, Mark Barringer, Mark Beasley, Meredith Bragg, Dallas Cothrum, Carlos Cuéllar, Camille Dean, Matt Esposito, Page Foshee, James Newsome, Tom Oakes, Jackie Stroud and Roger Tuller presented papers.

Don Dansereau (psychology), George Joe and Dwayne Simpson (IBR) have been notified that their article, "Attentional difficulties and the effectiveness of a visual representation strategy during drug abuse counseling," has been accepted by the International Journal of the Addictions. Don gave a paper, "Learning from spatial-verbal displays: A preliminary model," at the annual meeting of the American Educational Research Association recently in New Orleans. At the same conference, Judy Groulx (education) and Don presented a paper, "Knowledge maps: Some how-to's for interpretation and construction."

Charles Lord (psychology) has been notified that Donna Desforges (psychology Ph.D. 1991) received the 1994 University Excellence in Teaching Award in her third year as an assistant professor for the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point.

Wayne Ludvigson (psychology) attended the first annual Conference on Comparative Cognition held at Indialantic Beach, Melbourne, Fla. He gave a paper, "Now that S-R psychology is back, what have we learned?"

Holly Taylor (psychology) presented a paper, "Learning Environments from Descriptions," to the Association of American Geographers during its recent San Francisco meeting.

In early 1995, Routledge publishers of London will issue Imperialism and Theatre, a collection of 15 essays by international theatre scholars that includes an essay, "Contemporary Mayan Theatre and Ethnic Conflict: The Recovery and (Re)Interpretation of History," by Don Frischmann (modern languages and literatures).

During the April 8-10 annual gathering of the Texas Jewish Historical Society in El Paso, Juliet George (News Service) was elected to the organization's board. In March she was selected to chair the 1994-95 grants committee for the Southern Jewish Historical Society.

Senior geology major Matt Kulow and Richard Hanson (geology) recently presented a paper titled "Early Cretaceous ductile deformation associated with pluton emplacement in the Northern Sierra Terrane" at the annual Cordilleran Section meeting of the Geological Society of America, held in San Bernardino, Calif. The paper represents results of Matt's senior thesis research.

Jack Barrett (Tandy American Enterprise Center) has accepted an invitation to serve on the implementation steering committee, an outgrowth of Downtown Fort Worth Inc.'s Downtown Strategic Action Plan. The ISC will be a policy-making body directing the ongoing implementation of several projects recommended in the Downtown Strategic Action Plan. Among other community leaders invited to participate in the ISC were Edward Bass and Robert Bass.

ART HISTORIAN PLANS SUMMER TOUR

Australia, the Great Barrier Reef, New Zealand and Fiji are included in an 18-day "summer tour down under" package from June 8 to 25. Art and art history faculty member Gail Gear will be the escort for this South Pacific adventure, which includes sailing, scuba diving, coral viewing and touring Sydney and its famous Opera House. The tour cost of $3,880 includes round-trip airfare from Dallas/Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio or Austin, transportation and hotel accommodations.
