THE TCU FROG CLUB Supporting Athletics into a New Era

Dolores Oelfke is the epitome of a TCU fanatic. Her office is laden with autographed photos of current and former TCU stars as well as a collection of autographed footballs, baseballs and a flood of other sports memorabilia. There is also the collection of miniature frogs; porcelain frogs, carved frogs, camouflaged frogs and even frogs from as far away as Mexico, Panama and Puerto Rico.

Dolores is the student employment coordinator for TCU and when she's not busy helping students find employment opportunities, she's busy ensuring that the stands at TCU athletic events are filled with the cheers of TCU's tiniest fans, the Junior Frog Club members. Junior Frog Club members are children, 14 and under, who for a minimal pledge of $10 can join the TCU Frog Club.

Dolores is on the Frog Club Membership Committee and is always looking for ways to drum up support for athletics. Shortly before Christmas, Dolores and her daughter, Gina, a first-grade teacher at Mary Louise Phillips Elementary School in Fort Worth, debated what would make the ideal gift for each of Gina's students. Dolores offered to put up $5 — if Gina would match her — to sponsor a Junior Frog Club membership for each student in the class.

After agreeing on the deal, Dolores noticed that many of the children in her daughter's class came from single-parent homes where there was no time or money to take them to sporting events. The same rang true for many of the other children in the school. Since then, Dolores has been actively campaigning to raise funds to sponsor children in some of the other classes. To date she has helped raise enough funds to sponsor at least one classroom in each of the first-through fifth-grade classes at Mary Louise Phillips Elementary School, and she's working on getting kids across the Fort Worth Independent School District involved.

Hal Roach, executive director of the TCU Frog Club, praised Dolores for her commitment to TCU.

He said, "Through her efforts, Dolores is providing youngsters an opportunity to experience the fun and excitement of college athletics. Who knows, some of these boys and girls may be the TCU students and All-Americans of the future. I hope others will follow her lead and give more youngsters the same opportunity."

Because of her hard work, others have followed her lead. Dolores' list of sponsors includes some pretty big names: football coach Pat Sullivan, basketball coach Billy Tubbs, athletic director Frank Windegger and Chancellor Bill Tucker, to name a few. They have all sponsored Junior Frog Club members.

Dolores said the resurgence of TCU's athletics program along with the upcoming move to the Western Athletic Conference make this a perfect time for faculty and staff members to show their support for the home team.

Last year the men's tennis team captured the Southwest Conference title as did the baseball team and the football team, who captured a share of the title. This year the basketball team has surpassed the expectations of even the most optimistic fans and the future of TCU athletics is extremely promising. While faculty and staff participation is better than it's ever been, Hal said that he'd love to see everyone support the Frog Club.

CELBRATING BLACK HISTORY MONTH "The Legacy of Arthur A. Schomburg" Exhibit

"The Legacy of Arthur A. Schomburg," a compelling display which explores the life and times of this unique black collector, opened yesterday (Monday) at the Mary Couts Burnett Library. The exhibition, a memorable array of photographs accompanied by prized literary and historical artifacts, is touring nationally under the auspices of the Schomburg Center Traveling Exhibition Program. It will remain on view through Feb. 24.

Arturo Alfonso Schomburg was born in Puerto Rico in 1874. When he was in grade school, a teacher commenting on his African descent, told him that black people had no record of historical or cultural achievement. He spent much of his life dispelling that notion.

Schomburg migrated to New York at age 17 and married an African-American a few years later. Soon after, he began collecting books, manuscripts and works of art on black history and culture. By the early 1920s, he was well-known in literary circles as a world-class collector and a patron of the "Harlem Renaissance."

One of the world's leading authorities on black history, Schomburg built a private collection of more than 10,000 items. His acquisitions formed the foundation of today's Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture. He served from 1932 to 1938 as the first curator of the Division of Negro Literature, History and Prints of the 135th Street Branch Library. Shortly before his death in 1938, the division was renamed in his honor.

'NAME THE NEWSLETTER' CONTEST CONTINUES Entry deadline today

Your response to the "Name the Newsletter" contest has been wonderful. We have received more than 100 suggested names so far and you still have time to enter! We're busy making plans for a new, updated internal publication designed to improve upon the Weekly Bulletin. It will feature stories about TCU people, activities and events. Today is your last chance to help us name your new publication. On the back page of today's Weekly Bulletin, you'll find a form to jot down your suggestions. The form must be deposited in interoffice mail today (our address is on the back to make it easy). A panel of expert judges will vote on five finalists which will be published in the Feb. 28 edition of the Bulletin and you'll be asked to cast your ballot for the name you like best. The author of the winning entry will receive two $10 gift certificates for dinner or lunch at Romano's Macaroni Grill at 1501 South University. Good luck!

'EXPERIENCE INDIA' RAISES $9,000 FOR ORPHANAGES

More than 400 people from the Fort Worth/Dallas area gathered on campus Feb. 11 to experience Indian culture and to raise $9,000 for Mother Teresa's orphanages in India.

'Experience India' was successful in not only raising money for the orphanages, but also in increasing cultural diversity on campus, said Anantha Babbili, journalism department chair and faculty advisor for Students for Asian-Indian Cultural Awareness, the event's chief organizer.

The event included an Indian buffet as well as dancing, music and a fashion show. Two Delta Airlines tickets for anywhere in the continental United States were auctioned for $650. A portrait of Mother Teresa, painted by an art graduate student, was auctioned for $800. TV Asia filmed the event for possible worldwide air play.

SYMPHONIC BAND CONCERT SET FOR FEB. 27

Associate Director of Bands Robert E. Foster Jr. will direct the TCU Symphonic Band in a free public concert Feb. 27 in Ed Landreth Auditorium beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The Symphonic Band, consisting of nearly 70 members, will perform a wide variety of contemporary and traditional works, including pieces by Camille Saint-Saën, Kenneth Alford, John Barnes Chance, Roger Nixon and Claude T. Smith.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA SORORITY TO SPONSOR FASHION SHOW

Alpha Chi Omega sorority is sponsoring a dinner and fashion show on March 8 at 7 p.m. at the William Edrington Scott Theatre, 3505 W. Lancaster Ave. The evening of entertainment and food will help raise money for the Tarrant County Women's Haven.

Tickets are $15 per person and $12 for TCU students if paid before March 1. For more information or reservations, call 346-8605 or 921-2270.

PIANO CLASSES STILL OPEN

Places are still open in beginning piano classes for TCU employees. The classes will meet from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Fridays beginning this week. Classes run through April 28. The cost is $30. Call Leanne Kirkham at Ext. 6645 for more information on classes and Ext. 7132 to enroll.

PROFESSOR'S NIGHT OUT SET FOR MARCH 3

Alpha Phi Omega is once again hosting its semi-annual Professor's Night Out on March 3 from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. in the Rickel building. This is an opportunity for all TCU faculty and staff to take advantage of free babysitting for one night. For more information, contact Jennifer Anderson at 924-4509.

AMERICAN FOLKLORE EXHIBIT ON DISPLAY IN LIBRARY

"American Folklife: A Commonwealth of Cultures," the latest exhibit in a series portraying American culture and folklore, is now on display in the Mary Couts Burnett Library.

"The Library of Congress Corner" series reproduces historic documents, photographs, maps, prints, rare books and much more to describe eras in American history. Each exhibit is drawn from the library's vast collections and is complemented by a brief, explanatory text.

The current exhibit features photographs and commentary taken from the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress. The display will continue through the end of the semester.

The library is open to the public from 7:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

QUALITY SERVICE IS TOPIC OF '95 DYESS LECTURES

Quality service expert Valarie Zeithaml will speak as a guest of the Neeley School for the Earl E. Dyess Lecture Series Thursday. Zeithaml will address local business leaders during an invitation-only Executive Forum luncheon that begins at 11:30 a.m. in the Student Center ballroom.

Author of Delivering Quality Service: Balancing Customer Perceptions and Expectations, Zeithaml is principal of Partners for Service Excellence, a firm specializing in strategy, measurement and implementation of service quality and customer satisfaction programs.

Zeithaml has devoted 14 years to research, teaching and consulting on the topics of customer satisfaction, service quality and services management. Some of her clients include IBM, U.S. Steel, AT&T, Campbell Soup, Sears, Chase Manhattan Bank, and Proctor and Gamble.

The Dyess lectureship was established in 1982 by Houston businessman Jack Blanton Jr., president of Nicklos Drilling Company, to honor his late father-in-law, Earl E. Dyess of Fort Worth. The endowment enables the business school to bring a leader in the marketing field to campus annually to visit with students, faculty and the area business community.

PLANNING FOR A SAFE SPRING BREAK

As part of their Safe Break campaign, the R.O.A.D. (Responsibility of Alcohol and Drugs) WORKERS at TCU have planned a week of activities to encourage a safe spring break. Faculty and staff members are encouraged to participate in these activities and are asked to generate student participation by encouraging them to attend activities as well.

Included in the activities planned for the week of March 2-9 are a lecture by Dr. Michael Leeds, who will present "Michael Leed's Impact Training: Positively Impact Your Life, Your Organization, and the TCU Community." Doug Weiss, a licensed professional counselor and chemical dependency counselor, will discuss healthy sexual relationships in his presentation, "Having the Best Sex."

Safe Break Week includes will include a variety of other activities. For more information, contact the Alcohol and Drug Education office at Ext. 7100.

VISITING ARTIST WILL LECTURE TODAY

Visiting photographic artist Byrd Williams will discuss and show slides of his works today (Tuesday) at 9:45 a.m. in Moudy 132 N.

Williams' works have been exhibited at a variety of locations, including The University of Dallas; Allen Street Gallery and Photographic Archives in Dallas; The Hui Noeau Gallery in Maui, Hawaii; and The Perthshire Gallery in Scotland. His photography is included in several prestigious collections, including the Amon Carter Museum. Two of his photographs are on display in the art and art history department's office in Moudy 245 N.

Williams grew up in Fort Worth and studied business at TCU. He learned photography from his father, who ran a photography lab in Fort Worth. He later attended graduate school and received a Master of Fine Arts degree from Southern Methodist University. He taught at East Texas State University and Tarrant County Community College, and currently teaches at Collin County Community College.

Williams' lecture is sponsored by the Department of Art and Art History as part of the Art in the Metroplex series.

TCU IN THE NEWS

Phil Record's Feb. 12 column in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram featured follow-up responses by readers and editors to an earlier column he did on the coverage of victims of rapes. The columns were a response to recent national surveys conducted by Maggie Thomas, Tommy Thomason and Paul LaRocque of TCU's journalism department. For the most part, the Star-Telegram respondents agreed with the newspaper editors who responded to Tommy and Paul's survey: they think the news media needs to respect the privacy of victims.

"CBS Evening News" co-anchor Dan Rather's Feb. 13 visit to campus did not escape the attention of the local press. The event was covered by the Dallas Morning News, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, D magazine, the Irving Daily News and local radio stations KTCU, KRLD and KLIF. After a day of visiting with TCU students, Dan squeezed in a live shot on KDFW Channel 4's 5 p.m. news broadcast before he did his nightly national news broadcast from downtown Fort Worth. His 8 p.m. lecture in Ed Landreth Auditorium was made before an enthusiastic capacity crowd of students and Fort Worthians. Dan was a visiting Green Honors Professor and a guest of the radio-TV-film department.

Donovan Powell was featured in the Star-Telegram's TCU Extra page. Since transferring to TCU, Donovan is undefeated in the 55-meter race and is carrying on TCU's tradition of dominating the SWC in track and field.

Also profiled were Stevanie Ferguson and Brashant Carter. Stevanie has gained All-American honors in track and field, both indoor and outdoor, in each of her seasons at TCU. This senior shot putter is studying to become a nurse. Brashant is one of two male athletes competing in two sports at TCU. Besides being an outstanding member of the track team, this junior psychology major is also a defensive back on the football team.

NOTES ON FOLKS

An article by Mauricio Papini (psychology) has been accepted by the Mexican Journal of Behavior Analysis: "Effects of unsignaled reinforcers on response form as a function of reinforcer quality and distribution."

Lee Daniel (modern languages and literatures) recently published "Sor Juana's Baroque Martyr-Auto, El martir del Sacramento, San Hermenegildo" in the fall 1994 issue of the Latin American Theatre Review. The study reassesses the value of the 17th-century Mexican play and suggests a new classification for it.

Donald Jackson (political science) has been named a recipient of a 1995 Citizen Participation Award by the Tarrant County League of Women Voters. Don's work on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union impressed the Tarrant County League so much that its members created a new "Bill of Rights" award to recognize his good works. The award will be presented March 2.

Ted Klein (philosophy) has an essay, "The Idea of a Hermeneutical Ethics," has been included in The Philosophy of Paul Ricoeur, edited by Lewis E. Hahn. It is part of the Library of Living Philosophers published by Open Court.

Rocio Garcia of residential services recently passed her citizenship exam and is now a U.S. citizen.

Winifred Bryan Horner, Ida and Cecil Green Distinguished Emerita tutor and Radford Chair Emerita, was the subject of a recent article in Composition Studies: "Interview with Winifred Bryan Horner." She was also named as a "major rhetor" in Rhetoric: Concepts, Definitions, and Boundaries.

TCU alumna Sharon Benge was honored recently with the Live Theatre League of Tarrant County's Elston Brooks Award, which is named for a longtime Fort Worth Star-Telegram columnist. Sharon's work in the local arts scene spans decades. She currently co-hosts WRR-FM's "Arts Matters" program, coordinates and handles talent for several arts festivals and is involved in local efforts to expand ArtsEdge, the National Arts and Education Information Network.

Fred N. Terasa (extended education) was presented a 1995 Advanced Placement Special Recognition Award at the Southwestern Regional Assembly of the College Board. Fred was recognized for having created "a partnership for education excellence," as the director of TCU's Summer Advanced Placement Institute, the largest in its region, serving 309 AP teachers.

Fred also organized a team of advanced placement experts to present "Developing Vertical Teams: A New Variation on Teacher Training," at the Southwestern Regional Assembly in Albuquerque.

Fred and Diane Lovin (extended education) were co-presenters of "Exploring Opportunities Through the Process of Visioning," Feb. 1 at the 1995 Southwestern Regional Meeting of the College Board. Their session demonstrated the step-by-step process of organizing, tailoring and facilitating the visioning process and used examples of visioning experiences in the office of extended education and in the TCU/Cliburn Piano Institute Advisory Committee.

AUDIENCES TO PREVIEW PRODUCTION COMBAT

TCU theatre students will take on a drama originally performed to great acclaim by the Royal Shakespeare Company Feb. 22-26 in the University Theatre.

To give audiences a preview of their skills, TCU theatre students will demonstrate sword play from the Les Liaisons Dangereuses production tomorrow (Wednesday) at noon in the Student Center lounge. Theatre faculty member, stage combat expert and Les Liaisons director George Brown will discuss the play, its setting and stage combat as part of a brown bag lunch presentation. The event is free and open to the public.

Les Liaisons Dangereuses is based on a novel by Choderlos de Laclos set among aristocrats in 18th century France. A film version, Dangerous Liaisons, earned an Oscar.

TCU Theatre's willingness to tackle the French tale of sexual manners, manipulation and tragedy has surprised and impressed local theatre buffs, George said. "A lot of people in the theatre community are excited that we're doing this production. One reason we picked the play is because the students needed a challenge to develop their skills even further."

Performances of Les Liaisons Dangereuses will begin at 8 p.m. Feb. 22-25 and at 2 p.m. Feb. 26. Admission is free with a TCU I.D. Reservations may be made at Ext. 7626.

TCU MARKETING AND COMMUNICATIONS TASK FORCE NAMED

Chancellor Bill Tucker has announced the creation of a marketing and communications task force for the entire University. Its mission: to oversee the implementation of a comprehensive, integrated effort to expand the University's communications activities and as a consequence, its overall visibility and reputation. Chaired by Associate Vice Chancellor for Communications and Public Affairs Larry Lauer, the task force will apply an intensive marketing approach similar to that formulated for athletics marketing by the Committee of 100.

"We are taking a holistic approach to marketing so TCU can be stronger and therefore better," Dr. Tucker said. "This approach includes, but is not limited to, athletics and admissions. Thinking conceptually of the whole University, members of the task force can help TCU become more vital both now and in the years ahead."

Task force members include: Anantha Babbili (journalism), Shari Barnes (human resources), Kirk Downey (school of business) Kristi Hoban (alumni relations), Barbara Herman (student development services) Rick L'Amie (office of communications), Jill Laster (business services), Bill Lawrence (advertising/public relations consultant) John Maddox (publications), Leo Munson (admissions), Larry Teis (athletics marketing), David Van Meter (editorial services) and Sandy Ware (admissions).

"Task force members were invited to participate because of their particular area of expertise in telling the TCU story," Larry said. "However, task force members will be bringing their ideas to virtually every area of the University and will welcome input from everyone as the process moves forward."

SKITCH TO SPEND EVENING ON TCU CAMPUS

On Feb. 26, local audiences will have an opportunity to experience renowned conductor Skitch Henderson when he directs an on-campus concert featuring orchestra, chorus and soloists playing the music of Rodgers and Hammerstein. The "Evening with Skitch Henderson" concert, which is a benefit for University Christian Church's music program, begins at 7:30 p.m. in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

Henderson's campus visit is a follow-up to a 1993 Christmas concert in New York, when the TCU Choral Union and the University Christian Church Choir accepted an invitation to perform with the New York Pops under Henderson's direction. This time, Henderson will again be conducting his own orchestra, which will be complemented by TCU chorus members and soloists prepared by Ron Shirey, director of the TCU Concert Chorale and UCC choral ministries.

Henderson, who is former music director of the NBC Television Network and the music director of the New York Pops, is perhaps best known for his time at the helm of "The Tonight Show." He has conducted virtually every major orchestra in the United States and orchestras in Canada, Europe and Australia.

Tickets are $25, $35 and $50, and are available at 335-9000.

CREATIVE WRITING CONTESTS DEADLINE IS THURSDAY

The deadline for entries for the annual Creative Writing Contests is Thursday (Feb. 23). Entries must be submitted to English department offices (Reed Hall 314 or TCU Box 32872) no later than 4 p.m.

Outstanding contest entries will be recognized at an awards program April 6 in the Student Center ballroom. The awards program, which will feature readings by English faculty member and author Jim Corder, will begin at 3:45 p.m. and will be preceded by a 3 p.m. reception. Distribution of the 1995 Creative Writing Publication will follow the program.

The Cecil B. and Mary Beth Williams Lecture, which is usually given the day before the awards program, will instead be offered during the 1995-96 academic year.

More information on the contests is available from the English department.

EVENT HONORS NURSING STUDENTS

The Nursing Student Association of Harris College of Nursing hosted its annual dedication ceremony Saturday in Robert Carr Chapel. The traditional and colorful ceremony honored 55 students who completed their first semester of clinical courses.

Interim Associate Dean Rhonda Keen Payne was the keynote speaker and each student was presented with a pin shaped like the traditional nursing cap. The ceremony dates back to the early 19th century and Florence Nightingale, the English nurse known for reorganizing nurse training programs and reforming hospital conditions and procedures.

An informal reception for the honorees, their families and guests followed the ceremony in Weatherly Hall.
