Dear Mr. Monnig:

This evening I delivered the meteorite to Eureka Transfer and Storage Co. to be crated and shipped COD express. The sixty pounds we mentioned previously was only an estimate of the weight of the meteorite as we had no accurate way of weighing it. You will probably want to weigh it when it reaches you.

I'm sorry for the unexplained delay. I never seem to get around to writing when I should. I have had the meteorite at school for some time and displayed it to my science classes during the week after we wrote you. Then in the following weeks there were various errands to be taken care of after school so that I was unable to get the meteorite to the shipper. But finally, it's on its way to you.

I have a new teaching assignment for next year. I will be giving up my Junior High Science for four hours of General Biology (10th grade) and two hours of Advance High School Biology. I am looking forward to it but it will take a lot of organizing since advanced Biology will be a new course in our high school.

We have enjoyed getting to know you via our correspondence. If you are ever in our area please look us up as we would enjoy a personal visit with you. Meanwhile we'll be on the lookout for more meteorites.

Sincerely,

Elvin R. Phipps
