

1962, July 26.

Dr. B. Nagy,
Dept. of Chemistry,
Fordham University,
New York 58, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

Thank you for the reprint recently sent me on the subject of organized elements in carbonaceous chondrites.

I suppose I was put on your list thru an exchange of names from Dr. Edward Anders but regardless of how it happened I do appreciate the publication sent and would be grateful for any further reprints issued.

Some friends of mine and I have taken a rather special interest in carbonaceous chondrites because in some 25 years of effort to collect meteorites we have been fortunate enough to recover this type twice.

I am convinced that many more of them fall than is generally thought, but recovery is most difficult because of the fragile nature of the objects.

Yours sincerely,