TUCKER NAMES MINORITY AFFAIRS TASK FORCE

Four major charges are the foundation on which the recently appointed Task Force on Minority Affairs will build during the coming months. Ten persons were appointed by Chancellor Bill Tucker to the group that will offer its recommendations to him at the end of this academic year.

As outlined by Dr. Tucker, the task force is charged with responsibility of:

- Inventorying the existing formal activities and practices designed to attract minority staff, students and faculty to the University and to enhance their stay at the institution;
- Surveying similar institutions to determine their success in the aforementioned areas and to identify strategies that contribute to their success;
- Surveying the availability of resources, services, support groups and professional opportunities in the larger community;
- Writing a summary of the findings, including a comprehensive description of activities provided by the University and a set of recommendations that may serve to assist the University as it seeks to attract and retain minority staff, students and faculty.

"Without any question, the Task Force on Minority Affairs has a large and most important responsibility," Dr. Tucker said in announcing the selection of the 10 persons following consultation with the Faculty Senate's executive committee. "Be certain that all offices of the University will give full cooperation in responding to requests."

Chairing the group, which had its first meeting Sept. 27, is John Butler, minister to the University. "We will capitalize on what is already happening at TCU," John said, "and we will continue that progress as we draw from the experience of persons who have been active in the interest of minority affairs."

Other task force members are Emma Baker of financial aid, Mike Dodson of political science, Logan Hampton of Student Affairs, Jack Hesselbrock of athletics, Hortencia Kayser of speech communication and Morry Wong of sociology. Student members are Tisha Coleman, Matt Hood and Gina Ramos.

ROBINSON WILL RECEIVE ADA MEDALLION AWARD

The Medallion Award of the American Dietetic Association will be presented to Nell Robinson in Oct. 16 ceremonies in Denver during the 73rd annual meeting of the 60,000-member organization that comprises the nation's largest group of food and nutrition professionals. The honor recognizes individuals who have shown dedication to the high standards of the dietetic profession through active participation, leadership and devotion to serving others in dietetics and allied fields.

TCU's nutrition and dietetics department chairman will be honoree at an Oct. 15 reception hosted by the Texas Dietetic Association's board of directors at the Marriott City Center Hotel.

Nell, who guided the development of the University's Coordinated Program in Dietetics, has used her expertise to help the young and the elderly as well. From 1982 through 1990, she served as co-director and co-owner of TWIGS (Team Watchers in Growth Standards), a nutrition and exercise program designed for children ages six to 12 through which more than 250 overweight children learned healthful eating and exercise habits. She also has been active with the Senior Citizen Services of Greater Tarrant County Inc. and currently is that group's president.

Past president of both the Texas Dietetic Association and the Texas Dietetic Association Foundation, Nell was the first recipient of the state's Distinguished Dietitian Award in 1981. On the national level, she has served in ADA's House of Delegates and is currently chairwoman of the Council on Education's Division of Education Accreditation/Approval.

2,500 EXPECTED FOR PARENTS WEEKEND

Cool, crisp autumn air, classroom lectures, football and -- most important -- a chance to see their children far away from home will lure more than 2,500 parents here this weekend.

Coming to Parents Weekend from all over the United States, they will be entertained by a jazz band, modern and ballet dancers and talent show acts ranging from improvisation to a barbershop quartet.

Mini-lectures by distinguished professors, a tour of Fort Worth and the Parents Weekend 5K Fun Run are activities that will give parents and students an opportunity to share a weekend on the campus.

A victory party is planned after the Horned Frogs' clash with the Rice Owls. When it comes time to say goodbye, a brunch sponsored by the International Students Association will provide a sendoff as students say "aloha, bon voyage and ya'll come back."

"Students really want their parents to be here," said Scott Kiedaisch, San Antonio junior who is Parents Weekend chairman. "It also provides an excellent opportunity for parents to view the campus."

$100,000 GIFT CREATES SCHOLARSHIP FUND

The Southwestern Company Endowed Scholarship, created recently with a $100,000 gift to the University, will provide financial aid for students who must earn their tuition. This initial gift from anonymous donors inaugurates what is expected to become a $1 million endowment fund.

The new scholarship honors The Southwestern Company of Nashville, TN. Known as one of the South's largest publishers of Bibles, the company also publishes children's books, dictionaries and encyclopedias.

ART TO SHOW JAPANESE 'FIND'

Many of us dream of cleaning out closets and finding a beautiful gown, a piece of valuable jewelry, money we'd forgotten -- anything besides one more contribution to the church rummage sale. For art chairman David Conn, that dream came true.

Going through a large storage closet in the art department office, David found four brush drawings by Hiroshige, a Japanese master of Ukiyo-e or woodcut prints, along with almost three dozen of the woodcut prints by Japanese artists from the mid-18th Century.

The collection, admittedly somewhat of a mystery to the art department, will be shared with the public in an exhibition today through Nov. 2 in the Moudy Building Exhibition Hall, opening with a 6 to 8 p.m. reception today. Subsequent hours will be 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays and 1 to 4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

The Japanese drawings and prints aren't all David found. The art department has a sizeable permanent collection, and David is prepared to share them with the rest of the campus. He plans to make them available to University offices for a rental fee (maybe $30-$50 per year) which will pay for the framing. Call him at Ext. 7643 for more information.

In addition to the brush drawings, the new show will include some 30 woodcut prints, Japanese tools and 10 impressions showing how the woodcut prints are made.

David discovered the Japanese art works in a large brown envelope marked "purchased 1958." Some prices also were found, indicating that the unknown buyer paid $25 for each of the Hiroshige drawings and anywhere from 50 cents to $3 for each of the prints.

Art historians say some woodcuts with color as a unifying element were made by the Chinese in the 17th Century, but the Ukiyo-e, the multicolor Japanese prints of the 18th and 19th centuries, are more eloquently colored. Ukiyo-e prints were made by major artists -- most notably Utamaro, Sharaku, Harunobu, Hokusai and Hiroshige -- and were intended for the generally poor, uneducated classes, but they also were often purchased by travelers as souvenirs.

They could be bought for a few yen, often from street vendors or in markets, David said, and the subjects ranged from girls to actors to genre scenes and popular landscapes. Mount Fujiyama is a frequent subject. The Ukiyo-e prints became popular in France in the latter half of the 1800s. In 1860 the British magazine Once a Week illustrated articles on Japan with some of Hiroshige's landscapes, and in 1867 the Paris Exposition Universelle exhibited a large quantity of Ukiyo-e.

The prints sell now for anywhere from $500 to $15,000, depending on their condition, David said. Once this collection has been properly matted, he will send photographs of the works to a San Francisco dealer for evaluation.

CULTURAL THEORIST IS GREEN PROFESSOR

Dr. Aaron Wildavsky, noted political scientist from the University of California at Berkeley and co-author of the new book "Cultural Theory," will be a Visiting Green Professor Oct. 15-16.

He will present a public lecture, "Cultural Theory: An Introduction," to the Colloquium on Values and Public Policy at 3:30 p.m. Monday in Room 320 of Tandy Hall.

A prolific author, he collaborated with British cultural anthropologist Michael Thompson and American political scientist Richard Ellis to write "Cultural Theory." Wildavsky, who earned the Ph.D. from Yale, is professor of political science and public policy at the Graduate School of Public Policy at University of California-Berkeley and also is a member of the Survey Research Center there.

He is a past president of both the American Political Science Association and the Russell Sage Foundation and serves on editorial boards of numerous journals on budgeting, public policy and political science.

In his APSA presidential address in August 1986, Wildavsky argued that it is theoretically more useful to think of political preferences as rooted in political culture than to entertain alternative bases such as schemas or ideologies. A program of research on political cultures, he concluded, "would enable us to test the general hypothesis that how people organize their institutions has a more powerful effect on their preferences than any rival explanation -- wealth, technology, class, self-interest, tradition, you name it."

Known also as an analyst of the budget process, Wildavsky has authored or co-authored such works as "Deficit and the Public Interest" (1989), "The New Politics of the Budgetary Process" (1988) and "The Deficit and the Public Interest: The Search for Responsible Budgeting in the 1980s" (1989).

During his two days at TCU, Wildavsky also will discuss Hobbes and hierarchy with a political theory class, talk about the deficit with a legislative policy-making class, discuss how Poland became a third-world country with a class on politics of developing nations and propound his cultural theory to a couple of other classes. Anyone interested in hearing those lectures should contact Charles Lockhart at Ext. 7395 for Wildavsky's schedule.

TCU RESERVISTS CONSIDER WORLD CRISIS

The crisis in the Middle East could hit home for several of the TCU community who are currently serving in the military reserves. Most reserve units have been alerted to the possibility of being mobilized, and many units have already been sent to Saudi Arabia.

There's currently an open invitation for anyone in the reserves who would like to volunteer to go over to the Middle East.

Mickey Mattingly, a nurse at Brown-Lupton Health Center, has served as a Navy Nurse Corps officer for the last two years. "They tell you to get your will in order, talk to your family and settle your affairs," she said. "It's somewhat worrisome because I have a little girl to take care of, but I'm not losing sleep over it."

Laura Talbot, Harris College assistant professor, has served as captain in the U.S. Air Force since 1984. Before that time, she served two years of active duty. "If they say 'we need you,' of course I'll go. That's our mission," she said. "But I have four children ranging in age from six months to 10 years to think about."

If activated, the medical units would be sent to set up a contingency hospital in the combat zone to treat American military. "We'd set up a hospital in the desert and provide short term care," Mickey explained. "We would either treat them and send them back to duty or stabilize them and send them to a larger hospital."

Computer Center operator Theresa Brookins has served the last four years as a dental specialist in the Army. Her unit, which consists of dentists, hygienists and dental technicians, would set up equipment in the field to treat soldiers. "My biggest problem about this situation is waiting," she said. "If I have to go, that's my duty. But not knowing if we're going to go or not gets frustrating."

Personnel director Raul Armendariz has asked that faculty and staff members in the reserves contact his office.

MUNSON ASSUMES POSITION OCT. 1

Leo Munson, who joined the staff in 1983 as director of scholarships and financial aid, assumed the position of assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs this week after serving in an interim role for a year.

"The finalizing of this position will enable us to begin immediately a nationwide search for a director of scholarships and financial aid," said Vice Chancellor Bill Koehler in announcing the appointment.

Leo, a native of Council Bluffs, IA, was admissions counselor and then director of financial aid for nine years at Creighton University. He held the rank of captain while serving as a special agent in the U.S. Air Force. Active in the National Association of Financial Aid Administrators, Leo earned the bachelor's degree at Colorado State University in 1970 and a master's at Creighton in 1978.

SYMPHONY WILL PLAY MONDAY

The University Symphony, under the baton of new director of orchestral studies Kurt A. Sprenger, will play a TCU Music Series concert at 8 p.m. Monday in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

Kurt is completing his doctorate at the University of Southern California, where he has been a teaching assistant and a conductor for its magnet school. He also has taught at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater and at the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts.

Monday's program will include the Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis," which was composed by Gluck for the Paris Opera. On the strength of its success, Gluck was appointed by the Empress Maria Theresa as her composer. The orchestra also will perform Concerto No. 8, Op. 6, by the Italian violinist/composer Arcangelo Corelli and Haydn's Symphony No. 104 in D Major, London.

SMITH DESIGNS, HAND-DECORATES UCC CROSS

A seven-foot Roman bas-relief cross, gilded in 23K gold leaf and decorated with symbolic colors and motifs, was installed over the bapistry of University Christian Church on World Communion Sunday Oct. 7.

Designed and hand-decorated by Judy Oelfke Smith of publications, the cross was commissioned by Mrs. Robert D. Alexander in memory of her late husband, who was co-founder of Alcon Laboratories. Woodworker Mark Gilger built the basswood cross to Judy's specification, and the artist then chip-carved, painted and gold-leafed it to reflect the Romanesque decor of the church's sanctuary.

The cross is made up of four Roman crosses. At the end of each arm is a symbol for the four gospel writers: Matthew the winged man, Mark the winged lion, Luke the winged ox and John the eagle. The Paschal Lamb is at the center of the cross, holding the victory banner symbolic of Christ's resurrection. Background patterns employ such motifs as hearts, vines, grapes, rivers, circles and geometric shapes.

On the very top of the cross, facing up, are carved the words, "All glory, laud and honor to Thee, Redeemer, King." Such a message in such a place was not uncommon in medieval churches, according to Judy, a student of Christian symbology who joined UCC as a TCU freshman. In the 1960s she designed, painted and oversaw construction of 31 new leaded stained glass windows for the expanded sanctuary. She has since designed the communion table, created a master plan for the chancel and designed a tile floor using Christian symbolism for the sanctuary.

NOTES ON FOLKS

Music faculty members GARY WHITMAN, clarinet; GEORGE ROSENBAUM, viola; and JANET PUMMILL, piano, presented a recital at Cedar Valley College in Lancaster Sept. 19 as part of Cedar Valley's Guest Recital Series. Featured on the program was Canzonetta, Op. 19 by G. Pierne for clarinet and piano, Trio in E flat Major for clarinet, viola and piano by Mozart, and Four Pieces, Op. 83 for clarinet, viola and piano by Max Bruch.

Historian BEN PROCTER was the dinner speaker at the East Texas Historical Association meeting in Nacogdoches Sept. 21. His speech entitled "Leo Bishop and the San Augustine Crime Wave" had to do with one of his chapters in the forthcoming Ranger book entitled "Just One Riot."

SPENCER WERTZ (philosophy) has a discussion entitled "Why Is the Ontological Proof in Descartes' Fifth Meditation?" in the latest issue of Southwest Philosophy Review (University of Central Arkansas). Spencer makes the father of rationalism out to be an irrationalist when it comes to necessary truths and the concepts of God.

University Librarian FRED HEATH recently was appointed editor of LA&M, Library Administration and Management, the American Library Association's management journal. His two-year term as editor began this fall.

MORE NOTES ON FOLKS

Three representatives of the English department presented papers at the Research Society of Victorian Periodicals meeting Sept. 14-15 at the Armstrong Browning Library in Waco. ELIZABETH BATTLES (Ph.D. candidate) presented "The Contemporary Reception of Browning's 'Sordello'"; LINDA HUGHES, "Tuneful Numbers in Numbers: Serial Poems in Victorian Periodicals"; and JOE LAW, also a member of the Writing Center staff, "Mr Punch Goes to the Opera." KATHY McDORMAN (history) also attended the conference.

SUZANNE FARRELL TO AUTOGRAPH BOOK

Suzanne Farrell, longtime prima ballerina with the New York City Ballet, will autograph copies of her newly released autobiography Friday morning in the University Store, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

"Holding On to the Air," written in cooperation with former New York City Ballet dancer Toni Bentley and published by Summit Books, recently was reviewed at great length in The New York Times. "She's told an extraordinarily moving story" was the statement that closed the review by Walter Clemons, former book critic for Newsweek.

Farrell, wife of Fort Worth Ballet's artistic director Paul Mejia, traces her life from a childhood in Cincinnati to her audition with Balanchine and a full scholarship to his School of American Ballet at the age of 15 and from her earliest performances to the romance with Balanchine, who "fixed on Ms. Farrell as his muse and crowned his obsession by casting her as Dulcinea in the three-act 'Don Quixote' he had been wanting to make for 25 years," according to the review.

While she played down the envy of her colleagues when Balanchine singled her out, the reviewer noted: "Her emphasis is always on her devotion to work. Even when she describes how her body at last failed her, she rejoices in the years of opportunity she was given. Her solitariness is nonetheless haunting."

ARCHITECTURE LECTURE IS OCT. 18

Dr. Beverly Brown, assistant director of the Kimbell Art Museum, will present a public lecture here Oct. 18 on "Medieval Masons with Classical Dreams: The Birth of Renaissance Architecture." The talk will begin at 12:30 p.m. in Moudy Building 132 North.

A specialist in Italian Renaissance architecture, Dr. Brown received her Ph.D. from Northwestern University. Prior to joining the Kimbell Museum staff earlier this year, Dr. Brown was curator of Southern Baroque painting at the National Gallery of Art. She also has taught at Princeton, Harvard, Brown and Wellesley universities.

TCU IN THE NEWS

Frog Fever was the topic discussed by several students and the Health Center's BERT FRANKS for a KXAS-TV sports feature that aired Sept. 27-28. The reporter asked for definitions of the "malady" prior to the TCU-SMU game and received a variety of answers ranging from mild temperatures of fever to "pride causing chest swelling."

"Chief engineers oil firm comeback" was the headline for the Star-Telegram Tarrant Business profile Oct. 1 on trustee BILL ADAMS. Honored recently by the Fort Worth Business Hall of Fame, he has been chairman and chief executive officer of Union Pacific Resources Co. since 1986.

The TCU PRESS was credited with the continuing popularity and growing readership of works by novelist Elmer Kelton, whose "Stand Proud" and "The Man Who Rode Midnight" were issued by the Press this year, in a lengthy feature in the Sept. 30 Dallas Morning News. The story cited the Press' paperback series, The Texas Tradition, which began to reprint Kelton's works. Quoted in the story was Press editor JUDY ALTER.

"Getting Art Smart" was the title of the Star-Telegram's Sept. 30 story that called attention to art chairman DAVID CONN, cited as one of "two fine intaglio printers in Fort Worth-Dallas, and LINDA GUY, printmaking professor and lithographer who works with screenprinting.

The Oct. 1 issue of Tarrant Business called attention to the Center for Production Communication and its director KEN CRIDER, whose Lubbock-based TV anchor daughter he credits with teaching him about equipment. Ken and JANET HILDEBRAND of the center are on the agenda for the Association of Business Communicators meeting to be held in San Antonio in November.

In the Spring 1990 issue of The International Publication for Texans Not Living in Texas, TCU gets a lot of attention in an article entitled "The Horned Frog Should Be Official Animal of Texas." The writer, Frances Grimes Yeargin of Pasadena, relates the history of the frog as the TCU mascot, dating to Waco days when the little critters ran rampant on campus, and recalls some "highly ferocious" Horned Frog teams made up of such players as Davey O'Brien, Darrell Lester, Sammy Baugh and "the Purple Cloud, Bob Lilly."
