NEW SCHOLARSHIP FUND HONORS DOLAN

Widely known humorist George Dolan, columnist for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram for 31 years before his death in 1988, will be honored by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram/George Dolan Memorial Scholarship Fund. The $50,000 gift to TCU for the permanent endowment of the fund is being provided by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and its parent organization, Capital Cities/ABC Foundation.

The first award from the fund will be made for the 1990-91 academic year. Preference will be given to journalism majors "who possess the journalistic character of the late George Dolan." Recipients will be chosen by a selection committee, which will include Chairperson Anantha Babbili of the journalism department.

The scholarship fund is being announced by Richard Conner, president and publisher of the Star-Telegram, at a luncheon today (Tuesday). Special guests for the occasion include Dolan's widow, Melba Jane Dolan of Fort Worth, and other members of her family.

"It is especially appropriate that this scholarship bear the name of George Dolan, who was perhaps the best read and most popular columnist to appear in the Star-Telegram," Conner said.

"George was a first-rate journalist and a humorist whose work left its imprint on Fort Worth and West Texas over four decades. This scholarship will annually be a reminder of him and the standards he set," he concluded.

"We are extremely grateful for the support given us by the Star-Telegram and Capital Cities/ABC Inc. and the confidence they continue to place in the quality of our program," said Anantha. "We are all the more pleased that the scholarship has been named for George Dolan, who is part of Fort Worth's rich heritage and an inspiration to students and teachers of journalism.

"This scholarship fund will enhance the education of future journalists in this state and nation in the highest ideals of objectivity and journalistic ethics as well as in the art of good writing, editing and reporting," Anantha added.

Dolan, whose newspaper career began after World War II with the Daily Telegram in his native Temple, shared his humorous look at life and human foibles through a page 1 column, "This Is West Texas," for almost three decades before the paper's redesign moved it to an inside spot. In a newspaper survey, readers cited Dolan as more popular than celebrated columnists Ann Landers and Dear Abby.

Columns by Dolan, who described his technique as "anecdotes with people's names," were reprinted in two books, "Come Quick, Rodger's Having a Fit!" and "Slightly Left and Right of Center."

The Star-Telegram's earlier gifts to TCU have provided support for numerous educational and athletic programs in addition to gifts from Capital Cities/ABC Foundation for summer workshops for journalism students and an institute for gifted students.

TCU TO HOST CONFERENCE ON WOMEN, DRUGS

Statistics concerning women and chemical dependency paint a grim picture. Fifty percent of children of alcoholics (COA's) marry alcoholics. Seventy percent of COA's develop a pattern of compulsive behavior as adults, including alcoholism, drug abuse and overeating. Women develop alcohol-related health problems at lower levels of consumption and after a shorter period of drinking than men. Alcoholism is a problem affecting increasingly younger women.

Statistics concerning treatment programs for women paint an even grimmer picture. Although at least one in three alcoholics is a woman, women comprise only one in five in the treatment population.

These are issues which will be addressed at a Nov. 6-7 conference on campus. "Chemical Dependency from a Woman's Perspective" will bring to campus several distinguished authorities and will focus on educating the community on the special issues surrounding women and chemical dependency and on setting agendas to address gaps in services.

Speakers will include Dr. Martha Morrison, author of "The White Rabbit: A Doctor's Story of Her Addiction and Recovery," and Barbara Gordon, author of "I'm Dancing as Fast as I Can" and "Jennifer Fever." Also on the program will be Dudley Martineau, a Hazelden chemical dependency and family counselor; Dr. Norma Finkelstein, executive director of Women's Alcoholism Program in Cambridge, MA; and Dr. Jean Kilbourne, internationally known media critic, lecturer and writer who has studied the impact of advertising on society.

Conference sessions will be of special interest to chemically dependent or codependent females and their families; those who work with women, including counselors, physicians, clergy and social service agencies; community leaders; and students.

Registration fee is $25 ($30 after Nov. 2). Conference information is available from the Alcohol and Drug Education Program at Ext. 7100.

The conference is sponsored by 11 agencies, which include TCU Alcohol and Drug Education Program, Fort Worth Challenge, Junior League of Fort Worth, LINKS Inc., National Council of Jewish Women, Tarrant County Medical Auxiliary, Tarrant Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, Tarrant County Youth Collaboration, Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine, University of Texas at Arlington and Women's Center of Tarrant County. It is funded by a grant from the Office for Substance Abuse and Prevention to TCU.

DORAN RECEIVES STATE PROFESSOR HONOR

A new honor has been bestowed on mathematician Bob Doran, who has been selected as 1989 Texas Professor of the Year by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). The award was announced this week by CASE President Gary H. Quehl in conjunction with the Oct. 8-14 observance of National Higher Education Week.

A panel of more than 35 jurors selected 38 college and university professors for the state professor designation from more than 500 nominations submitted from across the United States. Criteria for selection included abilities as teachers, service to their institutions and professions, dedication to teaching and scholarship and achievement of former students.

The nation's largest education association in terms of institutional membership with some 2,850 colleges, universities and independent schools as members, CASE inaugurated the professor of the year program in 1981 to recognize undergraduate faculty members for their contributions to the lives and careers of students.

Bob, one of 11 honorees also designated as CASE gold medal winners in the competition this year, was chosen in April as one of Texas' 10 Piper Professors of 1989 for "superior teaching at the college level" from educators nominated by accredited institutions throughout the state. He was publicly recognized by Chancellor Bill Tucker during May commencement.

A member of TCU's faculty since 1969, Bob received the 1988 Chancellor's Award for Distinguished Teaching and was one of three faculty members given initial Burlington Northern Foundation Faculty Achievement Awards in 1986. Formerly a visiting scholar at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and at England's Oxford University, he also has been honored by the House of Student Representatives and Mortar Board, both in 1987, for outstanding teaching.

FALL ENROLLMENT TOTALS 6,725

Enrollment for the current semester totals 6,725, according to a report issued by Registrar Pat Miller. This figure includes 5,509 undergraduates, 1,042 graduate students and 174 in extended education.

"We are pleased to be within the University's desired range of students," Miller said. "TCU has been able to maintain the number preferred in this market without a change in standards even at a time when the nation's pool of potential college students is shrinking."

Important to note, Pat pointed out, is the fact that the largest number of persons in one year were graduated from TCU in 1989. The figure for December, May and August graduates -- all Class of '89 members -- totaled 1,498.

The incoming freshman class is within 40 persons of the size of the freshman class of last year. The fewer graduate students this fall "is the result of cessation of some state-funded programs in the School of Education," Pat said.

Minority student enrollment showed a 2.9 percent increase. The 555 minority total includes Hispanics, African-Americans, Asians and American Indians and represents over 8 percent of the student body. Foreign students account for approximately 3 percent of the enrollment.

MEMORIAL HELD FOR JENKINS

A memorial service for Merlin Jenkins Jr., emeritus associate professor of music, was held Oct. 2 in Robert Carr Chapel. A resident of Fort Worth since 1966, he died Sept. 29 in a local hospital.

The Gorman native earned bachelor's and master's degrees in music from North Texas State University. Before coming to TCU, he was band director for public schools in Haskell and Abilene. He frequently performed in area musical productions such as the Fort Worth Opera, where he was first trumpet. A member of the Coast Guard during World War II, he retired in 1987 after 21 years' service at the University. Merlin was active in the Texas Music Educators Association, Phi Mu Alpha, Kappa Kappa Psi and Tau Beta Sigma as well as the National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors and the National Trumpet Guild.

Survivors include his wife, Jessie; a son, David Jenkins of Carrollton; a daughter, Valerie Johnston of Fort Worth; his mother; and two sisters. Memorial gifts are being made to the TCU Merlin Jenkins Memorial Fund, Box 32920.

FRENCH PHYSICIST VISITS CAMPUS

Dr. Marc Fiex, professor of mathematical physics and director of a research group at National Center for Scientific Research in Orleans, France, is spending three weeks working with physicists on campus and speaking on computer simulation, rescaling and using the ideas of physics in other fields. Applying the principles of physics to other fields is the subject of "Statistical Physics Methods and the Optimization of Large Systems," a lecture to be given tomorrow (Wednesday) at 3 p.m. in Sid Richardson Lecture Hall 4. "It will show how the ideas of physics can be used in fields like operational research, dealing with non-physical objects like minimization of costs," Fiex said.

Earlier in his TCU visit, his reflection on the roles of computers in engineering and physics, "The True Nature of Computer Simulation," was delivered to faculty and students. In an Oct. 6 seminar he discussed "Similarity and Rescaling," the theory of reduced models and how phenomena with different length and time scales can be brought to the same mathematical description.

While in Fort Worth, Fiex is a guest of Bruce Miller. The two physicists had not met before this visit though they were familiar with one another's work. They hope to exchange postdoctoral or graduate students between Orleans and TCU in the future.

OFFICE STAFF PERSONNEL MEETS OCT. 11

The Office Staff Personnel will meet for a brown bag lunch tomorrow (Wednesday) at noon in the Woodson Room of the Student Center. Pat Jones, president of the North Texas Crime Prevention Association, will speak on "Personal Safety." This meeting is open to all interested persons.

TCU IN THE NEWS

"Student flow from China slow this year" was the Star-Telegram's headline Sept. 18 for a story in which AL MLADENKA (International Student Affairs) was quoted. A total of 13 graduate students had been admitted for fall, but all did not arrive, according to Al..."probably because there was not enough time to process their visas," he said.

As a part of the Sept. 19 story on Pete Geren moving into his new legislative offices, Channel 8 included his visit with TCU's WASHINGTON INTERNS. GENE ALPERT (political science), in the capitol for his beginning-of-the-year visit with the interns in their workplaces, had gathered nine of the students for a visit to Geren, who spent about 20 minutes with the interns.

"Some teachers reading last rites for junior themes" was the Star-Telegram's headline for the Sept. 25 story about traditional 11th-grade papers. Quoted was English chairperson NEIL DANIEL, who said the "high school research paper is outmoded and is usually taught by old-fashioned teachers who had similar assignments when they went to school. The notion that this is solid preparation for college performance is simply wrong."

JUTTA MERKT, a student from Trier, Germany, was shown in a color photo in the Star-Telegram on Sept. 22 as she translated for European visitors during a tour of a nursing facility in Fort Worth. Some 25 disabled persons from West Germany and Italy toured schools offering special education services.

Estha Briscoe Stowe, author of the TCU PRESS volume entitled "Oil Field Child," was the subject of a feature story that appeared Sept. 22 in the Star-Telegram. The result of a 30-year project, the book details her growing up during the oil industry's boom years.

"Celts gave the South its carefree ways" was the title of Kent Biffle's Texana that appeared in the Oct. 1 issue of the Dallas Morning News. Based on a presentation that LBJ Professor GRADY MCWHINEY made in Nacogdoches recently for the East Texas Historical Association, the column stressed the historian's contention that the Civil War was "not as much brother against brother as culture against culture."

Shrinking of the nation's pool of potential college students was cited as a major factor in decreases in some institutions' fall enrollment, according to a feature in the Sept. 30 issue of the Dallas Morning News. Quoted in the article was Registrar PAT MILLER, who credited this fact with forcing selective institutions to compete for a smaller group of top students.

"Life or death decisions: Who controls the quality of life?" was the headline for a story in the fall issue of Focus Magazine, published by Harris Methodist/Fort Worth. Quoted was ALICE GAUL (nursing), whose teaching includes biomedical ethics. "The technical advances of the '60s provided the capability to prolong life indefinitely, but no guidelines were given as to how and when life-sustaining measures should be used," she said.

NOTES ON FOLKS

Controller LARRY CALLOWAY was recognized in the introduction to Guidelines for Filing 1988 IRS Forms, recently issued by the National Association of College and University Business Officers. The introduction of the volume took note of "his outstanding work in making the monograph possible."

English faculty and graduate students gave four of the 36 papers presented at "Robert Browning & Nineteenth Century Culture: A Centennial Symposium," held Sept. 20-22. The conference, hosted by the Armstrong Browning Library in Waco, attracted scholars from the University of London, Massey University (New Zealand), CUNY, Duke University and elsewhere. TCU, however, had more representatives participating in the conference than any other institution. Those taking part and their paper titles were LINDA HUGHES, "Of Parts and Periodicity: Robert Browning and Victorian Serials"; BETH BATTLES (Ph.D. candidate), "Sordello and the Carlylean Hero"; JEFF NELMS (Ph.D. candidate), "Dickens's Christmas Carol: A Possible Source for Browning's Christmas Eve"; and AMY PATTERSON (M.A. candidate), "Browning and Tennyson as Seen in Lippo and Andrea." All presentations at the conference were taped and will be available on audio cassettes distributed by the Armstrong Browning Library.

Beth's paper was partly recorded on video as well as audio tape. Her presentation was filmed by Waco's local television station, Channel 10, and appeared on the 6 and 10 p.m. news on Sept. 21 as background for news coverage of the conference.

Physicist C.A. QUARLES has received notice that he has been awarded a patent number 4,853,537, for a device to measure the effective photoelectric absorption cross section for rocks. Listed as co-inventors on the patent are HALIM LEHTIHET, Ph.D. graduate and former postdoctoral fellow Joe Altman and Dr. George Salaita of Chevron Oil Field Research Co. The device may have application in the characterization of core samples in well logging.

RALPH BEHNKE (speech communication) has been designated as a manuscript reviewer for Human Communication Research, the primary empirical research journal of the International Communication Association, in the area of psychophysiological studies.

The U.S. Department of Labor has requested permission from CHARLES LATHAM (education/Upward Bound) to include a copy of an assessment instrument he developed in a compendium of "Things That Work in Job Training Programs for Youth." The Pre-Employment/Work Maturity Skills Test measures students' knowledge and skills in eleven areas related to the work-world. The publication will be provided to over 1,450 private industry councils and JTPA grant/contract recipients in the nation this spring.

Funeral services for RICHARD BIRDCREEK, associated with the maintenance department for 17 years before his retirement, were held at Laurel Land Funeral Chapel on Oct. 2. He died at his Burleson home Sept. 29. An ordained minister, he retired as a jet engine mechanic with the Air Force after 23 years before coming to TCU. Survivors include his wife, two daughters and a son, STEPHEN BIRDCREEK (physical plant).
