BOARD AUTHORIZES $5.2 MILLION RENOVATION

During its fall meeting Friday on campus, the University's board of trustees authorized a $5.2 million renovation of dining and food service facilities on campus, with work to start when all funds are in sight.

About half the needed amount is already committed, said Chancellor Bill Tucker, largely from the Brown-Lupton Foundation, which in the early 1950s totally financed -- and in 1966 expanded -- TCU's Brown-Lupton Student Center, which houses the facilities to be renovated.

The regular meeting of the governing board, with Fort Worth banker Bayard Friedman as chairman, came as Dr. Tucker began his 11th year as TCU's chief executive officer. He credited the trustees with setting the pace for the last decade's progress in academic and student services, in new facilities and in faculty and staff compensation.

"We have completed 10 consecutive fiscal years in the black and found it unnecessary to take on a single cent of external debt in the decade," he emphasized.

The audit of the last fiscal year showed that the University again lived well within its income. There were significantly increased costs due to worker's compensation premiums and medical insurance. But current fund revenues were up 5.7 percent from the prior year, to $85.4 million, due partially to mineral and endowment income. Thus, following board policy, the University was again able to add to its endowment and plant funds.

During the last decade, Dr. Tucker reminded the trustees, enrollment reached a period of "reasonable stability" while the University raised standards for admission and retention. But "success is the breeding ground for new problems," he said. Though the number of new freshmen (1,152) is in the range desired, TCU graduated its largest class ever in 1989 (1,498), causing a slight downturn -- and comparable graduation classes are projected over the next three years.

"To brake the downturn, we could lower our criteria for admission and accept more students with marginal academic records. Such a course of action would be counterproductive in my judgment," he said. "It is essential that we protect the gains we have made."

The Brown-Lupton Foundation, which is helping renovate the 35-year-old food preparation and dining facility, has long supported the University. Within the last decade it provided $2 million toward expansion of the library and another $2 million to help build Charles Tandy Hall, dedicated last spring as the newest building on campus. Earlier, it made possible construction of the Brown-Lupton Health Center. And even before the foundation was formed, one of its founders, Tom J. "Coke" Brown, in 1946 provided the $300,000 with which TCU built a men's residence hall during the rapidly-expanding period following World War II.

The J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation also has committed $750,000 for the renovation project, provided full funding is complete by Oct. 1, 1990.

"This places a task of considerable magnitude before us," said Dr. Tucker, pointing out that the University also is seeking support for another major project: The Winthrop Rockefeller Charitable Trust has pledged more than $1 million if TCU can raise $2.1 million to endow the unique Ranch Management Program. Some $850,000 of this goal has been raised.

Plans for the renovation project will get under way while funds continue to be sought. Lockwood, Andrews and Newnam, an architectural and engineering firm with headquarters in Houston and offices in Fort Worth and other Texas cities, was chosen to handle the project. The same firm was chosen to develop a master plan for the campus.

During their meeting, board members received their first report on the recommendations of the committee for academic planning, a group of faculty appointed to suggest directions for the academic mission of TCU. The committee made its report to the Faculty Assembly earlier this fall. After months of study and input from two other faculty/staff committees, the group headed by Neeley School of Business Dean Kirk Downey made nine broad recommendations:

- The University must develop a faculty, staff and student body that reflect the ethnic and cultural diversity of American society;
- Academic programs at TCU need to be carefully reviewed with particular attention being given to faculty and professional staffing levels;
- TCU needs to strengthen its graduate education by the enhancement of existing programs and the addition of new ones;
- TCU should consider new professional programs such as engineering and law;
- TCU should begin a coordinated, University-wide effort to better prepare students and faculty to live and function in a global society;
- TCU should identify and fund a limited number of programs with the potential for achieving national prominence;

- TCU should make the use of computer and other related technologies a major University-wide priority;
- TCU needs a comprehensive review of information resources, including the library and electronic data bases;
- TCU should establish a continuing academic planning program.

The report was presented to the trustees as a matter of information while some of the suggestions are being studied in more detail. The chancellor said he plans, at either the March or next November meeting of the Board, to propose what action should be taken on the report.

"Wise planning for the future precludes the possibility of easy answers," he said. "Hard choices must be made. Whatever the outcome, I am confident that the board of trustees in due course will adopt a plan of action with the potential to move this grand old University forward through the 1990s and into the 21st Century."

50 STUDENTS CHOSEN FOR WHO'S WHO

Who's who at TCU? Forty seniors and 10 juniors chosen from 360 nominees will be listed in the 1990 volume of Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

In addition to a 3.0 grade-point average for 54 semester hours of course work, the students demonstrated service to the University through participation in departmental programs and extracurricular activities.

The honorees will be guests at a dinner today (Tuesday) hosted by Chancellor Bill Tucker.

Students selected for Who's Who from AddRan College of Arts and Sciences were Julie Bettinger, Andy Black, Stephanie Boade, Bryan Cannon, Mary Cloninger, Susan Elliott, Kevin Faciane, Jill Ferguson, Alison Juban, David Lawrence, Keith Loudon, Cheryl Mann, Andy Maxwell, Jason Riddle, Renee Robinson, Eleanor Sanborn, Amy Stevens, Brad Vanderbilt, Jim Werth, Laura Whitworth and Bruce Wirin.

Chosen from M.J. Neeley School of Business were Todd Breeding, Betty Coggins, Ronnie Dunn, Jeff Layne, Lori McGivern, Connie McKnight, Beth Miller, Steve Reed, Jimmy Thomas, Doug Thompson and Glenn Wiebe.

Honorees from the College of Fine Arts and Communications were Alison Bode, Melanie Boyd, Ann Chachere, Hollie Grosklos, Ami Harry, Matt Hood, Patsy Rogers, Samantha Sloan, Lauri Spradley, Denise Taylor and Shelley VanDall.

Student honorees from the School of Education were Nancy Adams, Stacy Barham, Melanie Kaplan, Felicia Nelson and Jill Shepperd. Who's Who students chosen from Harris College of Nursing were Maria Ogle and Kathy Vandemore.

1ST-PLACE WINS COME EVEN IN LOSS

Frog swimmers ranked in first place in three events during the recent dual meet with Southern Methodist even though the Mustangs won 68-45. The Ponies currently are listed in the top 20 category.

First-place finishers included Steve Reed in both the 200 free and 200 butterfly, Keith Ludwick in the 100 free and Robert Blair in the 200 breast. The Frogs' loss in the 400 medley and free relays gave the Mustangs a 28-point lead.

After that meet, TCU was 1-1 in dual meets. Upcoming one-on-one competitions include Oral Roberts, Southwest Missouri State and the University of Arkansas.

"We swam very well after our emotional win against A&M," Coach Richard Sybesma said, "and I was pleased with how we competed. Last year we tied SMU here in an exciting meet; this year they were ready and really came at us very hard in the first two events."

HERMAN GRADUATE RECITAL IS TONIGHT

Ray Herman, award-winning tenor who completes his Master of Music degree in voice pedagogy next month, will present his graduate recital tonight (Tuesday) at 8 o'clock in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

The Richardson resident, a TCU graduate, received the Grady Harlan Award in 1988 as the singer with the most professional potential among all competitors in the Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico region of National Association of Teachers of Singing. He has sung with Fort Worth Opera and currently is a member of the Dallas Opera chorus.

Tonight's recital of a Bach cantata plus songs by Brahms, Ravel, William Bergsma, Respighi and Rossini will be followed by a reception in Ed Landreth. Ray will be accompanied by Susan Hoskins, staff accompanist at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, along with Shelley Cimbalo and TCU students Julie Buell, Ashley Lewis and Amy Sabin.

VOCAL CONCERT IS MONDAY

Five TCU singers -- four faculty members and award-winning senior Jimmy Taylor -- will perform an evening of vocal chamber music as part of the TCU Music Series at 8 p.m. Monday in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

Performers will include Judith Gans, soprano; mezzo-soprano Sheila Allen; Taylor, tenor; and baritones Arden Hopkin and Vince Russo. They will be assisted by Janet Pummill, piano; Pamela Becker and Gary Whitman, both playing basset horn and clarinet; and Laura Valenzuela, bass clarinet.

The program will include songs by Mozart, Schumann and Rossini.

UNIVERSITY COUNCIL TO MEET

The University Council will hold its next meeting Dec. 4, beginning at 3:30 p.m. in Room 109 of Reed Hall.

ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEWS INCREASE

On-campus interviews are on the rise this semester, according to Carolyn Ulrickson of Career Planning and Placement, who expects the number to be as much as 30 percent higher than last fall's figure. She reports that 950 students had on-campus interviews through Nov. 10. That compares to 758 last fall.

Many students are now involved in second interviews, which Carolyn views as extremely positive. She noted that some students have been flown to companies out of town and that all-day, off-campus interviews have not been uncommon. Students will report their interview-related absences, which will be listed in the Weekly Bulletin, Carolyn added.

HISTORIC RESOURCES BOOK INCLUDES TCU

Rarely seen photos of the campus in its earliest stages as well as residential developments around TCU are included in the Tarrant County Historic Resources Survey book, just published by the Historic Preservation Council for Tarrant County. Seventh in a series about the built environment of the county, the 288-page volume documents more than 500 structures with dates of construction, early residents or tenants and architectural significance. Included are more than 600 photographs of the structures in addition to 22 rare historic photographs previously unpublished.

In addition to buildings on campus, the book describes the nearby home that belonged to the late Coach "Dutch" Meyer, who achieved national prominence during 19 years as head football coach and as athletic director from 1953 to 1963.

The book was edited by TCU alumna Carol Roark, an occasional faculty member in art and art history. Copies are available in limited edition with leather binding with a $100 donation to the Historic Preservation Council at the council's office and in attractive paperbound version for $25 plus tax at a number of local bookstores.

EGYPT, NILE TRIP BEGINS DEC. 28

A 17-day tour highlighting the ancient civilization of Egypt and the Nile River, escorted by Gail Gear of art and art history, will begin Dec. 28 with departure from D/FW Airport. Dec. 1 is the deadline for applications.

Open to students, faculty and staff members as well as friends of the University, the program titled "Art and Archeology of Egypt" can be taken for three semester hours' credit. The trip will include in-depth visits to the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, Memphis, Sakkara, Alexandria, the Great Pyramid and the Sphinx, Ramses II's Temple at Abu Simbel as well as a seven-day Nile Cruise aboard a recently commissioned cruiser. A two-night stay in London is also on the itinerary. Additional information is available from Gail at Ext. 7118 or Ext. 7643.

NOMINATIONS OPEN FOR AWARD

Nominations of students for the Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship and Excellence in Education Program are being accepted now by Associate Dean Priscilla Tate of AddRan College. Open to those interested in a career in mathematics or the natural sciences, the award covers eligible expenses up to a maximum of $7,000 per year for two years.

Due by Jan. 31, nominations can be made by faculty and staff members. Nominees must be current full-time sophomores pursuing baccalaureate degrees, have B or equivalent averages, rank in the upper fourth of the class and be U.S. citizens or U.S. nationals.

Biochemistry major Stephanie Boade was named a Goldwater Scholar this year.

Interested persons should contact Priscilla in Reed Hall Room 111 by Dec. 8.

FELDENKRAIS CLASS OFFERED

The Feldenkrais Method, an approach to improving a person's ability to move with ease and poise by simulating the exploratory style of learning that is natural to infants, will be taught here Nov. 29-30 by Dr. Frank Wildman, director of the Institute for Movement Studies in Berkeley, CA.

The two-session workshop is scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. each evening in Room 223 of the Rickel Building. Tuition is $20, payable to Extended Education. Wildman will teach free classes for theatre, music and dance students from 3:30 to 5:30 on those afternoons.

Often taught to performing artists to enhance their abilities, the Feldenkrais Method also is recommended for athletes, for persons with recurring injuries or stress symptoms, for orthopedic patients, elderly persons with motor limitations, those with breathing disorders and persons suffering chronic anxiety or psychosomatic disorders.

Wildman, who studied with Dr. Moshe Feldenkrais more than 10 years, also directs the Feldenkrais Professional Training Program in Australia and works with American Physical Therapy Association and hospitals and clinics throughout the United States. He is a former dancer who earned the Ph.D. in psychology.

NOTES ON FOLKS

ART BUSBEY (geology) recently attended the Society of Vertebrate Paleontology meetings in Austin where he participated in a four-day premeeting field trip initiating other researchers into the geology and Cretaceous vertebrate paleontology of Big Bend National Park. Art and Tom Lehman of Texas Tech were co-editors of the 100-page field guide and introduced paleontologists from the United States, Canada, Germany and Israel to rocks containing the latest North American dinosaurs and pterosaurs, or flying reptiles.

At the three-day meeting after the field trip, Art was an invited participant in an NSF-funded workshop on computerization of systematic collections. He presented a paper on a fossil caiman from the Texas Gulf Coast and caiman systematics based on skull characters and an invited talk on the "Pros and Cons of Local Area Networking Within Institutions." His latest paper, "Form and function of the feeding apparatus of Alligator mississippiensis," appeared in the November issue of the Journal of Morphology.

WILLIAM BEEZLEY (history) has been named to the international advisory board of Mexican Studies/Estudios Mexicanos for the five-year term from 1990 to 1995. The journal is published at the University of California, Irvine.

BILL WATSON (chemistry) discussed materials science research projects in the chemistry department at the First Metroplex Advanced Materials Forum. The forum featured representatives from Metroplex universities with materials science research activities and from local industries. He also spoke recently to the chemistry club at Angelo State University.

In mid-October, ANDY FORT (religion), JOHN BUTLER (minister to the University), and ELIZABETH PROFFER (dean of students) presented a program at the annual conference of the Texas Association of College and University Student Personnel Administrators in San Antonio on "Beyond the Ivory Towers: Student Involvement in Hunger and Homelessness."

BABETTE BOHN (art) presented a paper entitled "Prints and Drawings by Agostino Carracci" at the annual meeting of the Southeastern College Art Conference in Little Rock on Oct. 28. Her review-article on Veronika Birke's Italian Masters of the 16th and 17th centuries appeared in a recent issue of Master Drawings.

MARK THISTLETHWAITE (art & art history) served recently as a juror for "An Artists' Christmas," an art exhibition and auction benefitting the First Texas Council of Camp Fire. Mark also participated as a panelist in a related program; "How to be Art Smart: A Symposium for Emerging Collectors."

GARY WHITMAN (music) made an inservice presentation Nov. 9 for Fort Worth ISD instrumental band directors on "The Saxophone: Teaching Aids and Performance Techniques." Included was a discussion of pedagogy and teaching aids covering all levels of students from beginners to the advanced level. A short section on beginning jazz improvisation was included in the presentation for students at the high school level.

STARPOINT children collected for UNICEF on Halloween day. Visits to four dormitories -- Colby, Sherley, Foster and Waits -- netted $69.73 for UNICEF's annual drive.

JULIAN HABER (adjunct, Miller Speech and Hearing Clinic) was part of the faculty for the American Academy of Pediatrics at its annual meeting in Chicago Oct. 21-22. He was on a panel that made a presentation on "Community Pediatric Care for Children with Disabilities."

Julian was quoted extensively in the September issue of National Education Agency Today (NEA) on hyperactivity and medication of children. His paper on a Four-Stage Approach to Early Childhood Intervention, previously presented at an international meeting in Hong Kong this summer, has been selected for inclusion in the Clearinghouse on Elementary and Early Childhood Education (ERIC) data base, and an abstract will appear in the forthcoming issue of Resources in Education.

"The Church's Educational Space: Creating Environments for Teaching and Learning" by CY ROWELL (Brite) has been published by CBP Press. The book provides guidance to churches planning to remodel or build new educational facilities. Cy also attended the Nov. 3-5 meeting of the Association of Professors and Researchers in Religious Education, where he made a presentation on the role of religious education professors as consultants to local churches on educational space and facilities.

ANDY MIRACLE (sociology) made a presentation at the recent conference of the Social Workers' Professional Development Association in Fort Worth. His topic was "Social Workers and Contemporary Shamanism." Alumna CLAIRE ARMSTRONG chaired the program.

JIM CLOUSER (ballet and modern dance) addressed the Clark Society at a dinner prior to the Nov. 3 performance of "The Ballet Svengali." His subject was "How Dance Tells a Story." He'll tell another part of the dance story Dec. 1, discussing the integration of kinesiology into professional dance training at the convention of Texas Association of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. The panel, which also will include Betty Ferguson of SMU and Woody McGriff of UT-Austin, will deal with professional trends and concerns as we approach the 21st Century.

Jim also has been commissioned by Tauna Hunter, former leading dancer of Ballet West, Colorado Ballet and Dallas Ballet, to create a solo work entitled "Moonsong" to the music of Alexander Scriabin. The work will premiere at a January 1990 Dallas Dance gathering.

RICHARD HANSON (geology) attended the annual national meeting of the Geological Society of America in St. Louis Nov. 5-9. He presented a paper entitled "Paleovolcanology of Jurassic extension-related submarine rhyolites on Staten Island, southernmost Argentina." He also was a co-author of two other papers, "Cretaceous island-arc/marginal basin transition in the southern Andes, Peninsula Hardy, southern Chile" and "Late Proterozoic syntectonic plutonism in the Zambezi belt, Zambia."

Historians GRADY McWHINEY, BEN PROCTER and SPENCER TUCKER attended and participated in the Southern Historical Association Meeting, which met in Lexington, KY Nov. 9-11.

MORE NOTES ON FOLKS

An interview by LEE DANIEL (modern languages) with the Chicago dramatist Carlos Morton has been published in the fall issue of the Latin American Theatre Review.

WAYNE JOHNSON (education) has been notified by the American Association of School Administrators that his program entitled "Teams & Themes: Strategic Planning via Shared Leadership" has been selected for two education showcase demonstrations at the AASA national convention Feb. 23-26 in San Francisco.

Speaker for the Nov. 14 meeting of the Fort Worth professional chapter of Women in Communication Inc., journalist TOMMY THOMASON has been named to the board of directors of the Fort Worth professional chapter of Society of Professional Journalists and to the foreign news committee of the Associated Press Managing Editors. On Nov. 8 he spoke at a crime victims and news media symposium at Cedar Valley College in Dallas.

LISA FUSILLO (ballet) attended the conference "Balanchine: Tradition and Innovation" in Miami Nov. 10-12. This was a landmark conference in the spirit of glasnost, as it was "the first Soviet-American forum to shed light on George Balanchine's early development in the turbulent years surrounding the Russian revolution," according to the Nov. 8 Miami Herald.

ARDEN HOPKIN (music) was invited to be one of three judges for Metropolitan Opera Auditions in Dallas Nov. 10-12. Participating in the auditions were alumni MARK HALL, theatre graduate, and LORETTA CROSTHWAIT, graduate of the Department of Music.

The TUESDAY-THURSDAY JAZZ ENSEMBLE, conducted by CURT WILSON, played a concert Nov. 9 at Tarrant County Junior College Northwest Campus. Curt was in Putnam Nov. 11-12 to judge the "Making Texas Music" competition for the fourth consecutive year.

AL MLADENKA (international students affairs) recently spoke on the West German educational system and cultural enhancement tours when TCU hosted the Association of Metroplex International Educators. He made another presentation dealing with immigration regulations and procedures at the annual meeting of the Texas Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Counselors in El Paso. Registrar PAT MILLER and ROSEMARY DROLLINGER (admissions) also attended the conference.

At the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs regional meeting in Baton Rouge, Al chaired two sessions, one focusing on current issues for departmental directors and another with KEN BUS on the educational systems of West Germany and Panama, including credential evaluation of students from those countries.

Earlier this month, SPENCER WERTZ (philosophy) attended an international sport conference in Washington, DC. The conference was a joint meeting between the North American Society of the Sociology of Sport and the Philosophic Society for the Study of Sport. Spencer participated in a discussion panel on the interdisciplinary aspects and possibilities for philosophy and sociology of sport. His contribution was titled "Postmodern Sport." In a session on the mass media and sport, he presented a paper entitled "Disputed Questions on Televised Sport."
