

Department of Earth and Planetary Sciences

Lunar Meteorite Dar al Gani 262 Al Jufrah, Libya

This is a photomicrograph of a small fragment (the ticks on the left are a millimeter apart).

Photo of a 1.54-gram subsample (courtesy <http://fernlea.tripod.com/collect1.html>)

Bischoff A. and Weber D. (1997) Dar al Gani 262: The first lunar meteorite from the Sahara (abstract), Meteorit. Planet. Sci. 32, A13-A14.

Bischoff A., Weber D., Clayton R. N., Faestermann T., Franchi I. A., Herpers U., Knie K., Korschinek G., Kubik P. W., Mayeda T. K., Merchel S., Michel R., Neumann S., Palme H., Pillinger C. T., Schultz L., Sexton A. S., Spettel B., Verchovsky A. B., Weber H. W., Weckwerth G., and Wolf D. (1998) Petrology, chemistry, and isotopic compositions of the lunar highland regolith breccia Dar al Gani 262, Meteorit. Planet. Sci. 33, 1243-1257.