

1967, March 23:

Mr. H. D. Caramichael, Director,
Dallas Health and Science Museum,
Fair Park, Dallas, Texas.

Dear Sir:

I was in your museum briefly early this month and noticed that the Hancockville, Texas, stone, a rather large one, was no longer on display.

I have no claims on this as it was located by the Dallas group but I understood at the time that the owner simply stated he did not wish to part with it, but would let it remain there on exhibit.

As a matter of curiosity and keeping up with the known meteorites from this region, may I ask what has become of it?

Yours sincerely,