STUDENT RECEIVES NAVAL RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP

Senior physics major Jim Wilson has been selected to receive an Office of Naval Research Graduate Fellowship, a prestigious award that covers the cost of graduate school for three years and offers summer work at Navy research centers. This is the first time a TCU student has won the fellowship, according to physics chairman Richard Lysiak.

Jim, who already had been admitted to the University of Arizona's doctoral program in optical sciences, will receive a stipend averaging $16,000 per year. The fellowship also covers full tuition and fees and pays a $2,000 allowance annually to the department. Summer work at the naval research labs is optional, and no military obligation is incurred. Although 432 individuals applied for the fellowship, only 44 awards were made.

A Chancellor's Scholar from Mission Viejo, CA, Jim will graduate in May with departmental honors. His senior Honors project, titled "Fractal Analysis of a Speckled Beam Profile," dealt with passing a laser through etched glass and recording the resulting bends and divergence. The experiment helped to define his interest in optics as a career. After earning his doctorate, Jim hopes to work in research and development for a high-tech company. Jim won both the Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa awards and was named Senior Scholar in mathematics and in physics.

Jim has time for other interests as well, including music. He began playing the piano in kindergarten and won a number of competitions through his high school years. Now more interested in electronic keyboards, he plays casually for friends and parties. He also is drum section leader in the Horned Frog Band.

MARTINEZ IS TCU'S 12TH ORGAN FULBRIGHT

When Willie Martinez leaves for the Robert Schumann Conservatory in Dusseldorf, Germany, next fall he will make an even dozen of Emmet Smith's organ students who have studied abroad on prestigious Fulbright Scholarships.

The senior from Texas City came to TCU because of another of Emmet's Fulbright students--Sherry Smith Babbit, who earned bachelor's and master's degrees here, studied at the same conservatory and is in her third year as artist-in-residence at Dartmouth. She came here at the instigation of yet another of Emmet's Fulbright-winning students, Allen Pote, 1968 graduate whose Fulbright took him to Belgium and who now is minister of music at First Methodist Church in Pensacola, FL.

Emmet was a Fulbright Scholar at the National Conservatory in Paris in 1955.

Willie got into organ study and the resulting Fulbright entirely by accident. Enrolled for his freshman year at Sam Houston State University to major in piano, he was one hour short in taking the number of credits required by his scholarship. A professor recommended he take a one-hour organ course.

After just one or two lessons, the erstwhile pianist was hooked on organ. Later in the year, Sherry, preparing to leave for Dartmouth, brought Willie to audition at TCU. One of Emmet's first questions was if Willie had any interest in a Fulbright. The positive response didn't surprise Emmet, who recalled when Sherry came for her audition she told him, "I'm going to do whatever is necessary to win a Fulbright and show my teacher I can do it, too!"

Before he came to TCU, Willie already had laid the foundation for his Fulbright by beginning to study German. He has continued to prepare, studying German here and taking private lessons. His use of the language was admirable in his Fulbright interview, a part of which must be conducted in the language of the country in which the student hopes to study.

Willie recently performed for the first time in New York, playing a recital at Park Avenue Christian Church. That church, which boasts a large Holtcamp organ, presents an annual spring recital by an outstanding TCU organ student. The audience that responded warmly to Willie's performance included Sherry Babbit, who came from Dartmouth for the event.

AUSTIN, HOUSTON EVENTS SET

"Reaching New Heights," the theme for the 1988 football season, will be discussed by Coach Jim Wacker at two alumni events this week. Tomorrow (Wednesday) evening he and quarterback David Rascoe, graduate of Houston's Westchester high, will speak at a reception/dinner event at the Houstonian Hotel and Conference Center.

Co-chairing the gathering sponsored by the TCU Houston Association officers and directors are Al and Monette Huling, Class of '58 members.

Thursday evening Jim will speak to Austin alumni and friends at a reception/dinner event at Austin Country Club. Sponsored by the TCU Austin Association, it is being chaired by co-presidents Pat and Aimee Kane Sheehan, Classes of '69 and '70, respectively. Also on the program will be Chris Becker, junior from Taylor who has set records during the last two seasons as the Frogs' punter.

JOST WINS HONORS SCHOLAR AWARD

A projected study of capital punishment for crimes committed by juveniles has earned the Honors Scholar Award for Dana Jost, a junior history and political science major from Burleson.

The issue of capital punishment for juveniles is pending before the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of William Wayne Thompson vs. the State of Oklahoma. The high court must determine whether the execution of persons under the age of 18 constitutes cruel and unusual punishment.

Dana pointed out that the attitude of American society towards capital punishment and the juvenile justice system has changed tremendously during this century. Beginning in the 1890s, the number of juvenile executions each decade ranged from 20 to 27. In the 1930s, the number of juvenile executions rose dramatically, peaking in the 1940s with 53 executions.

She plans to use her $650 award, given annually to an Honors student to support a particular program of study, to research and write an historical paper analyzing social attitudes toward juvenile delinquents during those peak years and to explain that surge in the number of juvenile executions.

PADGETT ADDRESSES FACILITIES SESSION

The Southern Regional Conference of the Council of Educational Facility Planners (CEFPI) held its annual meeting April 15 on campus. Sid Padgett, former director of facilities planning and president of the Southern Region, presided over the meeting and delivered the keynote address, "Introduction of Exterior Environment." This theme was elaborated on by speakers on "Planning for Plantings," "Trouble Shooting Plant Problems" and "Planning for Plant Maintenance." These related topics were highlighted by a tour of the campus.

The afternoon session topic was "Noise in the Classroom." The meeting was adjourned after reports from the representatives from Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas, states in the CEFPI's Southern Regional Conference.

SKIFF, IMAGE LEADERS CHOSEN

Aisha Saleem and MariCarmen Eroles will be editors of the Daily Skiff and Image, respectively, next year. They were selected along with advertising managers for each during an April 15 meeting of the publications committee.

From Missouri City, Aisha currently is the newspaper's managing editor and has been copy editor and columnist. Last fall she participated in the Washington Center internship program working with the Washington Office on Africa. She is active in the International Student Association.

MariCarmen, majoring in journalism and Latin American studies, was copy editor for the Skiff last fall and has been managing editor for Image this year. From Mexico City, she is active in the International Student Association and recently was honored by the journalism department as "journalist of the year."

Robin Zink of Austin, now in her third semester on the Skiff's advertising staff, will be the paper's advertising manager. Active in Sigma Delta Chi, the Advertising Club and Programming Council committees, she is an officer in Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

An advertising/public relations major from Leawood, KS, Chuck Hendley will be the magazine's ad manager. The 1988 student Homecoming chairman heads the campus chapter of Public Relations Student Society of America and has been active in the House of Representatives.

JUNIOR CHOSEN FOR ENGLAND MEET

Christina Massingill, junior nursing major from Arlington, is recipient of a Fuld Fellowship to attend the 5th International Conference and Exhibition on Cancer Nursing to be held this fall in London. "Cancer Nursing--A Revolution in Care" is the theme for the Sept. 2-9 meeting.

Awardees were chosen from representatives of nursing schools across the nation, according to Harris College of Nursing's Dean Pat Searse. In nominating Chris, she called attention to her "mature outlook and her handle on her goals and objectives, which is relatively rare for one so young as Chris" as well as her interest in oncology patients which "does not merely stem from sympathy and compassion but also from a rare understanding of the difference high quality nursing care can make for both the patient and the family."

Earlier this month Chris, who has worked as a Licensed Vocational Nurse, was among those honored at the National Student Nurses' Association convention and awards banquet in Pittsburgh, PA. She and others named as Fuld Fellows were introduced by Alan Trench, chairman of the Helene Fuld Health Trust.

The New York-based Helene Fuld Health Trust, established in 1951, promotes health, welfare and education of nursing students through accredited schools of nursing by grants to be used for the direct benefit of nursing students.

FORT RICHARDSON HISTORY IS NEW RELEASE

Fort Richardson, located at Jacksboro in North Central Texas, has gone down in history because of its central role in the Warren Wagon Train Raid. It was at Fort Richardson that the bodies of the murdered wagoners were returned, and it was in Jacksboro that the three Kiowas--Satanta, Satank and Big Tree--were tried for murder, the first Indians to be tried before a civil court.

But Fort Richardson deserves a much stronger place in history, as demonstrated in "Sentinel of the Southern Plains: Fort Richardson and the Northwest Texas Frontier, 1866-1878" by Allen Lee Hamilton. The book will be published in June as No. 5 in The Chisholm Trail Series from TCU Press.

This lively, well-documented history demonstrates that Fort Richardson, once the largest military fort in the United States, was the linchpin of the Army's defensive strategy on the Texas frontier. Research for this thorough study was a labor of love for Hamilton, who grew up in Jacksboro literally within gunshot of the old fort. Now a member of the history faculty at San Antonio College and St. Philip's College in San Antonio, he spent more than 12 years studying the records of the fort: scanning microfilm, turning dusty pages, poring over government records, sifting through photographs and talking with those who have preceded him in studying the history of Jack County.

The result is a book for both the general reader and, with its extensive notes and bibliography, the serious student of Texas frontier history. For Hamilton, it is also a book about old friends and about home. "Sentinel of the Southern Plains" is generously illustrated with period photographs and accurately reproduced maps.

The 288-page work, priced at $14.95, is available in the University bookstore.

CONSORTIUM SET FOR MAY 9

Nineteen private colleges and universities throughout the South, including TCU, will offer discussions and information about their academic programs May 9 during a free session for high school students and their parents. Sponsored by the 19-member Southern Consortium, the public event will be held in Dallas at the Westin-Galleria, 13340 Dallas Parkway, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Formal presentations as well as personal sessions with representatives of the colleges and universities will be included in the evening session. The diverse educational opportunities of member institutions, all of which practice selective admissions, will be discussed. High school counselors in the Fort Worth/Dallas area also are invited to the program.

Members of the Southern Consortium, which was founded in 1979, all subscribe to an ethical code assuring good practice and selectivity in college admissions. The institutions include Rice and Trinity universities along with TCU and SMU in Texas. Other members are Agnes Scott, Davidson, Hollins, Rhodes and Rollins colleges in addition to Emory, Furman, Sewanee, Stetson, Tulane, Miami, Richmond, Vanderbilt, Wake Forest and Washington and Lee universities.

Additional information is available from Charleen McGilvray, Ext. 7490.

JAZZ BAND OFFERS 'TRIBUTE TO DUKE'

If you're old enough to remember Duke Ellington (or even if you've just heard of him), the TCU Jazz Ensemble has a treat for you tomorrow (Wednesday). The band will present "Tribute to the Duke" at noon in Student Center lounge, and brown baggers are encouraged.

Curt Wilson, director of jazz studies, says the concert is a preview of the ensemble's May 4 presentation at the Caravan of Dreams. The 8 p.m. program by Metroplex jazz groups will be presented by the Fort Worth Jazz Society, and the TCU players will begin their section at 9:30 p.m.

TCU RECEIVES FURNITURE FROM AT&T

Fifty steel desks with accompanying chairs are now in use in offices and residence halls across campus, thanks to a recent gift from AT&T. Formerly used in that company's offices, the furniture is valued at more than $11,000, according to spokeswoman Sue Ellen Price.

A long-time benefactor of TCU, AT&T has been generous in its gifts to educational programs and scholarship funds as well as with equipment.

LARRY KING TO BE WORKSHOP SPEAKER

Journalist-author-playwright Larry L. King will give the keynote address for the 11th Annual TCU/Chisholm Trail Writers Workshop. To be held on campus, the June 11 event is sponsored by the Chisholm Trail Round-Up Association, TCU Office of Extended Education and the TCU Press.

Most widely known for "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," King is author of five stage plays, one screenplay, two television documentaries, a novel, a children's book and 10 other books, including the collection of essays "Warning: Writer at Work," published by the TCU Press in 1985.

Called "The Writing Relationship," the conference will explore the relationship between editors and authors, a creative relationship that has been called "closer than a marriage, more intimate than a love affair, more trusting than wartime comrades."

Joining King on the conference faculty will be Sally Arteserios, senior editor at Doubleday and Company; TCU alumnus Ellis Amburn, former editorial director of G.P. Putnam's Sons and now a free-lance author working with such stars as Kim Novak and Shelley Winters on their biographies; Robert Flynn, Texas novelist and author of the recently published and highly acclaimed "Wanderer Springs"; and English department chairman Fred Erisman.

Luncheon will be served during the all-day seminar, and an autograph party reception at Thistle Hill, Fort Worth's historic cattle baron mansion, will follow. Enrollment is $25 for the seminar, with an additional $5 for the optional reception. Reservations are required for both the seminar and the reception. The workshop is one of many activities planned for the City of Fort Worth as part of the Annual Chisholm Trail Round-Up, a weekend which celebrates the city's heritage from the Old West and, particularly, the cattle industry.

Additional information is available from extended education, Ext. 7134.

TCU IN THE NEWS

Junior TANDRA PACE of Marshall made headlines in her hometown paper as a result of recent honors. Vice president of the student chapter of American Society of Interior Design, Tandra has been chosen by the interior designers of the Texas region to serve as student director for interior design majors for a five-state area to coordinate the Texas Board of ASID.

"Novelties for sales" was the Star-Telegram headline for page 1 of the Business Journal Plus section on the story about unusual ads and gimmicks businesses use to get attention and retail results. Quoted in the story were DAVE CRAVENS and BILL MONCRIEF of the Neeley School, who noted that marketing requires a "break through the clutter" and something different to draw attention and be more effective.

NOTES ON FOLKS

Dean of Students LIBBY PROFFER represented the board of the Day Care Association of Fort Worth and Tarrant County at a National Policy Conference on the economic implications and benefits of child care sponsored by the Child Care Action Campaign in New York March 17-18. She also participated in the official opening of a program entitled "The Tarrant County Child Care Initiative" on April 6 at the Fort Worth Club. The new program will study the need for child care in Tarrant County and will make recommendations on how to meet those needs. Libby is serving her second six-year stint on the day care board.

At this week's 5th annual National Women and Work Conference at the University of Texas at Arlington, DOUG NEWSOM (journalism) will be one of the session speakers. Her topic will be "What the Language and Artwork in Annual Reports Say About an Organization's Attitude Toward Women."

During April SPENCER WERTZ (philosophy) has read several papers to philosophical organizations. He delivered the presidential address titled "Reference in Anselm's Ontological Proof" to the North Texas Philosophical Association, hosted by the University of Texas at Dallas, and presented "Hume and the Historiography of Science" to the New Mexico-West Texas Philosophical Society meeting in Albuquerque.

Sympathy is extended to DON SAWICKI (physical plant) on the recent death of his mother. Funeral services were in Nebraska.

LINDA NUGENT (physical plant) has been elected president of the Fort Worth Purchasing Managers Association with term of office to begin May 1.

DONNA HALL (speech communication) presented a paper, "Join The Breakfast Club," at the Southern Speech Communication Association Convention in Memphis April 7.

CAROL SEWELL and DEVON ABBOTT, graduate students in history, won writing awards in the graduate division at the Phi Alpha Theta regional conference at Baylor April 16. Carol won first place for her work on Herbert Eugene Bolton, and Devon took second place for a paper on health care at the Cherokee Female Seminary.

MARK THISTLETHWAITE (art and art history) delivered the keynote address to the annual meeting of the Texas Association of Schools of Art at the Texas Tech Conference Center in Junction. Mark's paper was on "The 'Objective' Eye: The Critical Dimensions of Art History."

Because the TCU Jazz Festival is now officially affiliated with Musicfest U.S.A., sponsored by DOWNBEAT magazine and Yamaha, CURT WILSON (music) will be in Orlando, FL, May 6-8 as an observer and guest of that festival. The next week he will adjudicate concert and jazz bands and orchestras in Toronto for the Music, Maestro, Festivals. Curt will also conduct clinics for Canadian high school jazz ensembles.

Sympathy is extended to BARBARA HANCOCK, residential housekeeping supervisor, on the death of her mother, Ruth Donnell, April 2 in Waco.

MORE NOTES ON FOLKS

Nutritionists MARY ANNE GORMAN and MARY HAGER were among participants in St. Joseph Hospital's April 13 program on nutrition as related to "the cardiac puzzle." The daylong program was sponsored by the Fort Worth Dietetic Association. Mary Anne's presentation was "Health Benefits of Dietary Fiber: An Update," and Mary spoke on "Sucrose Polyester as a Substitute for a Dietary Fat Source."

GAIL DAVIS (nursing) recently gave presentations related to her research, "Measurement of the Chronic Pain Experience," at two national conferences. The first was The Measurement of Clinical and Educational Nursing Outcomes Conference sponsored by the University of Maryland and held in San Diego. The second was The First National Conference on Research for Practice, Key Aspects of Comfort: Pain, Fatigue and Nausea sponsored by the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

KEITH ODOM (English) attended the national convention of the College English Association in New Orleans April 13-16 where he read a paper, "'Vision of the Union of Man and Nature': Anne Bronte's Characters and the Romantic Personality," and served on the CEA board of directors. At the convention, Keith was elected second vice president of the CEA for 1988-89. BOB FRYE (English) also read a paper at the CEA convention, "Artful Compositions, Corder's 'Laws of Composition,' and the Weekly Letter in Freshman English: Gladly Learning about Invention and Arrangement."

On April 9 DAVE EDMUNDS (history) received an Alumni Achievement Award from Illinois State University, where he earned the Master of Arts degree. The awards are made annually to alumni whose achievements have been significant or who have been honored by a major society.

T.W. ZERDA (physics) won the second award for his paper "Positronium Decay Study of Pore Sizes in Silica Sol-Gels" at the Materials Research Society Meeting in Reno, NV, April 4-8. The first award was given to the University of Illinois group that produced the single superconductive crystal. While in Reno he also was invited to speak at a seminar in the University of Nevada at Reno's chemistry department, where he lectured on his Raman studies of silica sol-gel structures.

ARTURO FLORES (modern languages) presented a paper entitled "La pastorela: origen y postulados teoricos. Dos ejemplos" at the recent Boulder, CO, meeting of the National Association for Chicano Studies. His article, "Literature popular y legado universal: Notas sobre 'La pastorela' en el suroeste de los Estados Unidos," was published in the spring issue of Mundo.

Psychologist RICHARD FENKER recently presented workshops on sport psychology for coaches and athletes at the Rhythmic Gymnastics National Championships in San Francisco. In addition to serving as national and Olympic team psychologist for rhythmic gymnastics, he also was appointed scientific coordinator and chairman of the Science Advisory Committee.
