LEADERSHIP ACADEMY STARTS MONDAY

Two dozen Texas school administrators will be on campus for the third annual Academy for Educational Leadership Monday through July 15, when the theme will be "School Executives for the 1990s: Developing Agents of Change."

Keynote speaker for the academy will be Dr. Vincent Reed, vice president of The Washington Post who formerly served as assistant secretary of elementary and secondary education under U.S. Secretary of Education Terrel Bell and as superintendent of the Washington, DC, public schools.

The educators also will hear from Dr. Ed Kelly, superintendent of Prince William County Schools in Virginia, on "Equity--The Process of Educating Students." As superintendent of schools at Little Rock in 1982-87, Kelly filed a landmark desegregation remedy suit against two surrounding school districts and the State of Arkansas, claiming they had contributed to Little Rock's becoming an all-black school district.

Other speakers will include Dr. Richard Hooker of the University of Houston, an expert on Texas school finances who frequently consults with the state legislature; Dr. Maria Niteo Senour of San Diego State University, developer of the nation's first training program for minority counselors; E.H. Schollmaier, president of Alcon Laboratories, talking on "Leadership"; and Fort Worth school superintendent Dr. Don Roberts, discussing "Leadership Skills for the 1990s: The Administrator's Perspective."

Cherie Lohr is academy director, assisted by Carol McGrevin, and other TCU participants will include Vice Chancellor Bill Koehler, who will welcome the participants; Associate Vice Chancellor Ned Boehm; and Vice Chancellor Margaret Barr, who will talk on "The Politics of Educational Leadership."

The academy is made possible by gift support from the Carl B. and Florence E. King Foundation of Dallas, First Republic Bank of Fort Worth and Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Taylor Jr. of Arlington. Carl Yeckel, vice president of the King foundation, will be a luncheon speaker July 11.

NEW FACULTY, STAFF APPOINTMENTS

Member of the Neeley School faculty since 1982, BILL MONCRIEF will begin a three-year term as marketing department chairperson this fall. The University of Mississippi alumnus, who earned the Ph.D. at Louisiana State, is the author of numerous studies in professional publications, including Industrial Marketing Management, Journal of Consumer Marketing and International Journal of Advertising.

PURNENDU MUKHOPADHYAY, research associate at the University of Houston since 1986, will be associated with chemist Robert Neilson and his research throughout the summer. The newly named research scientist holds degrees from India's Presidency College, Calcutta and Jadavpur universities. His studies have been published by the Royal Society of Chemistry in London and in the Journal of Chemical Research.

DAVID METZ, who joined the admissions staff June 1 as associate director, formerly filled a similar position at Trinity University. Holder of the B.A. in political science from the University of Arizona, he served as admissions counselor and assistant director at New Mexico Military Institute and Lamar University.

Joining the admissions staff today (Tuesday) as assistant directors are CARLOS LAIRD and RON MILLER. Active in the Student Foundation while a student at Southwest Texas State, Carlos was an admissions counselor at UT-Austin. Ron earned two degrees at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse, where he was graduate assistant in admissions and university affairs. Between degrees, he was an international trainer/high school basketball coach in Copenhagen, Denmark.

STEVEN SHERWOOD, writer/editor and former lecturer at Montana State University, will be instructor of English and also will work with the Center for Academic Services writing program. He earned the B.S. in journalism from the University of Colorado and M.F.A. in fiction from the University of Montana, where he was a teaching assistant in 1985-87.

20 FROM TCU OFF TO DEMO CONVENTION

While most folks are sitting around watching the upcoming Democratic National Convention on television, 20 TCU students will be right in the thick of things--working, studying and earning college credits.

The 20, ranging from incoming freshmen to graduate students, will be in Atlanta Sunday through July 22 for the convention class, set up under the direction of The Washington Center. Other students have been selected from the 600 colleges and universities with which the Washington Center is affiliated.

Gene Alpert, political science chair who helped to instigate the political convention study programs four years ago in cooperation with The Washington Center, will be faculty leader for both convention programs this summer and has written a convention guide that will be distributed nationally by Cable News Network.

In Atlanta the students will be briefed daily by such guest speakers as newsmen David Brinkley, Sam Donaldson and Bob Schieffer; political notables George McGovern, Sam Nunn and Paul Simon and TCU professor emeritus Paul Boller. The students also will take workshops on the electoral process and national policy issues and will take on individual fieldwork assignments with state delegations, convention organizers, media and other groups. Many of the sessions are to be held in the convention hall, with students becoming a part of the convention action.

Fort Worth residents in the group are Gerald I. Appel, a 1986 graduate working toward a graduate degree in speech communication; Anthony M. Contino, 6700 Brookhaven, a Manhattan College graduate enrolled in the Master of Liberal Arts program; and Monica A. Henry, a recent graduate of O.D. Wyatt High School and an incoming freshman.

Others include Sarah E. Bigger of Mansfield, LA, sophomore majoring in political science; Andrew J. Black of Spring, sophomore business major; Kurt J. Ellinghausen of Stone Mountain, GA, senior political science major; incoming freshman Elizabeth K. Goacher of Birmingham, AL; Eric A. Holmes of Slidell, LA, senior political science major; K. Beth Humphrey, an incoming transfer student whose home is in Texarkana.

Also in the group will be Mark D. Johnson, sophomore, political science, Littleton, CO; Vincent M. Mathews, junior, radio-TV-film, Malvern, AR; incoming freshman Amy M. Parris, Dunwoody, GA; sophomore political science major Eric G. Ricketts, Aledo, IL; new freshman Holly M. Schneider, Cypress; junior political science major Ellen D. Schrottke, Austin; new freshman Stephen M. Schultz, Little Rock; Sarah P. Smith, Atlanta, sophomore, political science; Scott C. Thresher, junior business major, Simsbury, CT; Kristen D. Van Heyningen, sophomore psychology major, Royalton, OH; and Brad Vanderbilt, sophomore political science major, Plano.

Twenty-four TCU students are registered for the Republican Convention symposium Aug. 7-19 in New Orleans.

TCU IN THE NEWS

Going back to her medical roots was the focus of the Star-Telegram EXTRA feature June 15-16 on JUDY ALTER (TCU Press). Referring to her book entitled "Mattie," whose main character was an early day female doctor, the story followed Judy's career and noted that her family tree included 18 doctors.

"Award to help TCU professor delve into naval history" was the headline on the Dallas Morning News feature on historian SPENCER TUCKER and his U.S. Navy Department grant to study the gunboat navy of Thomas Jefferson's time.

The use of sexist language, a topic she developed for a recent Women and Work Conference, was discussed June 26 by DOUG NEWSOM (journalism) on a talk show for Radio KNON.

"Paging potential nurses" was the headline on the Star-Telegram's June 20 story about the nursing shortage and measures being taken by area institutions to meet the need and to encourage more to enter the profession. Among those quoted was Harris College Dean PAT SCEARSE, who noted that TCU is aggressively seeking students who have degrees in other areas. Thirty with degrees ranging from music to home economics will enroll this fall.

Admissions' CHARLEEN MCGILVRAY was among those rating cheers in the Star-Telegram June 18. In a note from Doris Gluck of Gifted Students Institute, she was cited for "terrific arrangements she coordinated for the Gifted Students Great Books Festival," a four-day training session held recently on campus.

Students SHANNON O'KELLEY and TODD OVERTON were in the Cheers section of that same issue for changing a flat tire for an older woman with severe arthritis and for refusing to take money for their help. "Cheers also to TCU and their fine students. May God bless them all," the letter ended.

"Stock divestment offers no help to S. Africa blacks" was the title of the Op-Ed article by Chancellor Emeritus J.M. MOUDY that appeared June 19 in the Star-Telegram. Calling divestment "a non-solution," he suggested that "the discussion should proceed to other tactics that people in a distant USA might adopt with helpful effect."

In the June 26 Dallas Morning News story entitled "Colleges feel brunt as businesses lure Ph.D.'s," English chairperson FRED ERISMAN noted that he already has begun a search for new English doctoral recipients in light of the fact that half the English faculty is expected to retire in the next six to 10 years. The number of doctoral graduates entering college teaching has been on the decline since the early 1970s, according to the lengthy story.

"What they're telling the class of '88" was the headline in the Houston Post for its June 13 full-page series of excerpts from commencement speeches across the state that quoted from Chancellor BILL TUCKER's graduation remarks. Others included Secretary of the Treasury James Baker, speaker at the University of Houston; FBI director William Sessions, UT-El Paso; Surgeon General Everett Koop, Baylor College of Medicine; Gov. Bill Clements, A&M; Texas Secretary of State Jack Rains, Sam Houston State; President George Rupp at Rice; and journalist Bill Moyers, UT-Austin.

TCU NOVEL WINS SPUR AWARD

"Wanderer Springs," a novel written by Robert Flynn and published in 1987 by TCU Press, was chosen Best Western Historical Novel of 1987 by a panel of judges from Western Writers of America. The Spur Award from WWA was presented June 30 at the group's annual convention in San Diego. Flynn, who resides in San Antonio, was unable to attend, and the award was accepted by Press director Judy Alter.

Judy read Flynn's acceptance message, which spoke of the award's physical attractiveness--a spur mounted on an inscribed wood plaque--and its even more important meaning for those who try to deal creatively with the American West and its meaning in our lives.

"Wanderer Springs" is a witty yet sensitive novel about one man's return to his North Central Texas hometown, a physical and imaginative journey that not only crosses geographic and cultural boundaries but also darts back and forth in time, emphasizing our inextricable link to the past. Larry McMurtry has called the novel "sad, funny, surprising, always interesting...a very good book."

A Spur Award also went to alumna Joyce Roach for her short nonfiction piece entitled "A High Toned Woman," first published by the Texas Folklore Society in its anthology "Hoein' the Short Row." The Keller resident is the co-author of a folk history of Texas food to be published by TCU Press in the spring of 1989.

COLLEGE GUIDE LISTS TCU

TCU is one of 314 colleges and universities selected for listing in the 1988-89 edition of Peterson's Competitive Colleges. This group represents approximately 10 percent of all American institutions of higher education.

In addition to the listing, TCU is one of 225 institutions working with Peterson's in a special project to send free copies of the book directly to more than 50,000 high-achieving high school students. Copies also are sent to high schools that traditionally graduate a high percentage of college-bound minority students.

The college guidebook includes informative data important to high school students interested in top-ranking institutions. Each pagelong college profile includes high school rank and test scores of freshmen, academic resource and special programs, percentage of applicants accepted and those who enrolled, costs and financial aid, majors, sports offered and scholarship information. Criteria for the "competitive" designation is based on data that indicate the achievement level of entering freshman classes.

WORCESTER RECEIVES SADDLEMAN AWARD

Don Worcester, Green Emeritus tutor in history, is recipient of the Saddleman Award for 1988. Designated for "a living individual who has made an outstanding contribution to the American West," the prestigious honor of the Western Writers of America Inc. was presented last week at the organization's annual convention in San Diego.

The former history department chairperson and Lorin A. Boswell Professor of History in 1971-80 was chosen for the award on the basis of his numerous published works on Western history as well as for his training of many writers of this genre during his 40-year academic career. Don also is widely known as past president of the Western History Association, Westerners International and Western Writers of America. He is author of more than 20 academic books in addition to many fictional works. His novel about the Texas Rangers entitled "The War in the Nueces Strip" is being published by Doubleday.

TAIWAN SYMPHONY TO PLAY HERE

The Hsui Shan Primary School Symphony Orchestra will perform at 7 p.m. July 13-14 in Ed Landreth Auditorium as part of a cultural exchange program between Fort Worth and the Republic of China on Taiwan. Admission is free.

The orchestra, made up of 10- to 12-year-olds, has won the Outstanding Performance Award during national competition each of the last seven years. The 200-member group has performed in Japan and played at the national Athletic Games of Taiwan in 1987. Hsui Shan Primary School is located in Chungho, a suburb of Taipei.

NOTES ON FOLKS

BOB DORAN (mathematics) attended "The Legacy of John von Neumann" mathematical conference at Hofstra University May 29-June 3. Sponsored by the American Mathematical Society, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, the National Science Foundation and IBM, the conference was held in honor of Von Neumann's remarkable contributions to mathematics and science. The current state of research in the mathematical fields he developed was reviewed during the conference.

CAROLYN SPENCE CAGLE (nursing) has remained active in presenting and attending programs devoted to her specialty of maternal-child health. April 29-30 she attended a "core competencies for maternal-infant health" program in Kansas City and provided an academic perspective to several groups on the teaching of critical content in maternity courses. In mid-June at the American Nurses' Association Convention in Louisville, Carolyn presented an afternoon program on access to prenatal care based on a nationally completed study on that issue.

Three journalism students won a total of $5,000 towards scholarships from the Press Club of Dallas. The recipients are REGINA HATCHER ($1,500), LISA TOUYE ($1,500) and incoming freshman KELLIE LANDER ($2,000). Several other students have received scholarships/grants from the Fort Worth chapter of the Sigma Delta Chi/Society of Professional Journalists, Fort Worth Advertising Club, Reader's Digest Foundation and Women in Communication Inc.

KEITH ODOM (English) spoke May 20 to the Golden Years Fellowship of University Christian Church on "Valuing Old Books."

EUGENE BORING (religion-studies) was awarded $2,000 as part of the Eli Lilly grant to Christian Theological Seminary administered by former Brite faculty member Newell Williams. Gene will use the money for travel and research on the history of biblical interpretation in the Disciples of Christ. This segment of the research will deal primarily with the Disciples encounter with higher criticism of the New Testament.

CYNTHIA FOLIO, BOB BLANTON, NOAH KNEPPER and RUTH WHITLOCK (music) judged the University Interscholastic League all-state solo-ensemble contest in Austin in late May. One of Cynthia's high school flute students, Amanda Armstrong, who plans to enroll in TCU as a freshman in the fall, received the highest score for a Mozart concerto. At the same time the TCU flute quartet, under Cynthia's direction, tied for first place among college/professional flute ensembles taking part in a Texas Flute Society contest at SMU. The quartet is made up of students CHRISSEY RYDER, BETH PATTON, ROBYN LEWIS and MICHELLE BULLOCK. Chrissy and Beth also received honorable mention for solo performances.

Cynthia, who also adjudicated a Texas Music Teachers Association contest in Dallas June 11, has been notified that an article entitled "Jazz Session with Cynthia Folio" will be published in the Flute Journal, official journal of the National Flute Association. The article consists of a transcribed jazz flute solo with analysis and commentary.
