MAJOR EDUCATION FIGURES WILL VISIT TCU

The School of Education will host two major figures in the field of education this week and next. Emily Feistritzer, educational authority whose private research firm has charged that as many as half this nation's teacher education programs are inadequate, is on campus today (Tuesday). Larry B. Silver, acting director of the National Institute for Mental Health and author of "The Misunderstood Child: A Guide for Parents of Learning Disabled Children," will be here Nov. 8.

Dr. Feistritzer, director of the National Center for Education Information, called for a national proficiency examination for teachers and for a standardized certification process after her center conducted a broad survey of the nation's teaching programs and all state teacher certification agencies. "Far too many teacher education programs today accept anybody and everybody who harbors the slightest aspiration to teach," the report stated. "No assessment of qualifications takes place at entry or exit from such programs, and courses offered are ill-defined and often impractical. All such programs should be summarily shut down."

Fewer than 10 percent of the institutions responding to the survey used high school rank or grade-point average as a criterion for admission, and 82 percent did not use standardized college entrance test scores. The study also showed that fewer than half the respondents required students to pass a test at the completion of their teacher education programs.

Dr. Feistritzer, who holds the Ph.D. from Indiana University, is also associated with Feistritzer Publications, which publishes the Department of Education Weekly, Teacher Education Report, Health Education Report and White House Weekly. She was the author of "The Condition of Teaching," a state-by-state analysis prepared in 1983 by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching which concluded that the caliber of students going into teaching is lower today than ever before.

Dr. Feistritz's TCU schedule includes meetings with Metroplex media, with the TCU education faculty and an address to a group of area educators at 4 p.m. today in Sid Richardson Lecture Hall 1. The latter lecture and question-and-answer session are open to the public.

Dr. Silver, who is clinical professor of psychiatry at Georgetown University School of Medicine, will be a guest here of Starpoint School and of Fort Worth Academy. A former professor of psychiatry, pediatrics and chief of child General Psychiatry at Rutgers Medical School, he has been concerned for the past 20 years with children and adolescents with learning disabilities and their families. His latest book, published last summer by McGraw-Hill, offers common-sense advice to parents of learning-disabled children and shows that, with patience, perseverance and support, they can help.

Very few people, including parents and educators, really understand the problem of learning-disabled children, he says. Unfortunately, understanding is what they need most. Dr. Silver urges parents to educate themselves about learning disabilities; to select schools, camps and day care centers carefully to ensure the program will suit the child's needs; to emphasize the child's strengths to help the child feel more confident; and to inform the child's teachers of the learning disabilities, spelling out in what areas the child needs the most help.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION FILM TO BE SHOWN

The Affirmative Action Office has scheduled three showings of "The Power Pinch," a film on sexual harassment. Narrated by actor Ken Howard, the film uses dramatizations to point out subtle forms of harassment.

All faculty and staff members are invited to view the film which will be presented on the following schedule:

- Nov. 1-4 p.m. - Student Center, Room 204
- Nov. 2-noon - Student Center, Room 204
- Nov. 2-3 p.m. - Student Center, Room 204

The film is 26 minutes long, and a short period for questions or discussion will follow the film. Additional information is available by calling Ext. 7792.

RESERVATIONS DUE FOR NOV. 7 SEMINAR

Reservations must be made by Friday for Faculty Woman's Club's lunch seminar Nov. 7, when Lynda Davis of TCU's Management Information System will talk on "Life with Computers." The session will begin at 11:45 a.m. in the Bass Building living room. Brown Baggers are welcome but also need to call ahead.

Cost of the luncheon is $4, and checks should be delivered to Carol Adcock, Box 32917, or Room 101, Sadler Hall, by Friday.

BROWN BAGGERS TO SEE PERFORMANCE ART

Fort Worth artist Letitia Eldridge will be TCU's Brown Bag Series guest Monday, presenting a program of performance art at noon in the Student Center Gallery. Audience members are welcome to bring a sack lunch.

Ms. Eldridge is a ceramicist known especially for her ceramic masks. She combines her flair for theatrics with the ceramic masks in presenting performance art.

CHANGES MADE IN SPRING REGISTRATION PROCESS

Changes in procedures for both advisement and advance registration for the 1985 spring semester have been made. These are described as "dramatic changes" from those listed on the University's calendar by acting registrar Marvin Keith.

The new schedule provides an expansion time for each element of the advance registration process. Advisement, previously limited to one week, has been extended to two weeks, beginning Nov. 5. Registration has been expanded from one to three weeks, starting Nov. 12.

Forms for the Nov. 5-16 advisement, which also will serve as the student's registration form, will be available in the student's major department. Completed in consultation with the departmental advisor, the form will have a final check and approval by the academic dean. No registrations will be accepted without advisement forms, Marvin said.

Advance registration, set for Nov. 12-29, will be on a classification basis rather than the usual alphabetical schedule. Seniors and graduate students will register Nov. 12-14, juniors on Nov. 15-16 and Nov. 19; sophomores, Nov. 20-21 and Nov. 26; freshmen, post graduates and special students, Nov. 27-29. Late registration for all classes is planned for Nov. 30 and Dec. 3-4.

While Nov. 20 is set for a special evening student enrollment, evening students will be allowed to register according to their classification during the Nov. 12-Dec. 4 schedule.

During the 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. registration periods in the registrar's office in Room 19 of Sadler Hall, students will see their registration go on-line on the computer and negotiate schedule changes at that time if some class sections are closed. The following day, they will be able to pick up a copy of their schedule printout.

The new system also has the advantage of deans and department chairman being able to monitor the status of courses from their offices, Marvin explained. Prior to the start of advisement and advance registration, complete packets of information including samples, descriptions of courses and details will be provided the administrators. Extra copies will be available on request from the registrar.

TUCKER TO ADDRESS AUSTIN GROUP

Alumni in the Austin area along with parents of current students and other friends of the University will gather Wednesday evening at Austin's Hyatt Regency Hotel. Featured speaker for the evening will be Chancellor Bill Tucker.

Planned by the TCU Austin Association, the Oct. 30 event will begin with a 7 p.m. reception followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Coordinating the gathering is alumna LaNeal Tankersley, association treasurer.

ISA STUDENT WINS MR. BELGIUM TITLE

International student and bodybuilder Bart Desender was named Mr. Belgium as he finished first-place in his native country's top bodybuilding contest Oct. 6. Bart, a master's student in kinesiological studies, is now qualified to enter the Mr. Universe contest next October.

Although Bart first started working out seven years and 140 pounds ago, he didn't begin competing until this year, when he won the Southwest Collegiate Bodybuilding Competition in April. In June he qualified in the semi-finals for Mr. Belgium and earlier this month won his third competition. Although eligible to compete for Mr. Europe in the spring, Bart said he may have to skip that contest because of his studies, which he is due to finish in May. Bart received his bachelor's degree from TCU in kinesiological studies two years ago. His older sister Trudi graduated from TCU in 1980, and his younger sister Ludwina is studying international affairs here.

Bart began bodybuilding when he stood six feet three and weighed 115 pounds. Now at 255, Bart has the world amateur championship--Mr. Universe--as his goal.

ARTIST TO LECTURE HERE THURSDAY

Fort Worth area artist Vernon Fisher, who has become a "superstar" of the art world in the last four years, will speak Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Moudy Building 132N. As part of the art department's on-going Metroplex Artists Series, he also will have a work on display through November in the department office, Moudy Building 245N.

Fisher's recent works combine words and images. A graduate of Hardin-Simmons with a master's degree from the University of Illinois, Fisher got his first big art break in 1970, when former Fort Worth Art Museum director Henry T. Hopkins included his work in the museum's exhibit, South/Southwest: Younger American Artists.

A former art teacher at Austin College, Fisher received a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts in 1974 that enabled him to spend full time painting for a year. That was when he began doing the narrative works, combining work images with landscape or other representational content. Since 1978, he has been on the NTSU faculty.

MLA LECTURE WILL BE NOV. 7

Ashley F. Bryan, author and illustrator of children's books, will deliver the annual MLA lecture at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 7 on "Deep Like the Rivers: Black American Poets and African Folktales." His lecture, presented with the cooperation of the TCU School of Education, will be in the Faculty Center.

A professor at Dartmouth, Bryan was born in the Bronx, graduated from Cooper Union and Columbia University and has taught at Queens College, Lafayette College, the Dalton School and other institutions in the New York area. He uses his African heritage, cultural background and experiences to bring his stories and illustrations to life.

"Black American poets have been a vital source of inspiration for my work in retelling African folktales, since we have common roots in the black oral tradition," he says. "The black poets have taken this 'un-Negro tongue' (English) and created the sounds and rhythms by which one is uniquely identified."

Bryan captures the spirit of the black oral tradition by experimenting with sound in retelling African folktales, and, for the best effect, he encourages reading his stories aloud. He is the reteller and illustrator of "The Ox of the Wonderful Horns and Other African Folktales," "The Adventures of Aku," "The Dancing Granny" and "Beat the Story Drum, Pum-Pum." He has also edited and illustrated a collection of poetry of Paul Laurence Dunbar, "I Greet the Dawn."

Known as a compelling speaker, Bryan will include in his lecture examples of his illustration techniques, including woodcuts, linoleum block prints and brush drawings. For the presentation of his folktales, he often uses hand puppets made from sea glass, shells and driftwood collected from the island in Maine where he spends his summers.

CONCERT CHORALE TO SING MONDAY

Music from many countries and a long range of historical perspective will be presented by the Concert Chorale for TCU Concert Hour at 8 p.m. Monday in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

Beginning with Renaissance music by Victoria, "O All Ye That Pass by" and "O how glorious is the kingdom," the choir also will sing "He who with weeping soweth" by Schutz and "Come, Jesus, Come" by Bach. Brahms' New Love-Songs will be performed by the chorale and duo-pianists Birgit Rohowsky and Candy Williams.

The latter half of the program will include five traditional songs of the Southwest which were arranged by Randy Bass, an ex-student of Ron Shirey, the choir's conductor. Also on the program will be Four Slovak Folk Songs by Bela Bartok, a traditional Russian folk song entitled "Bird of Youth" and two spirituals, "Deep River" and "Ain't-a That Good News."

UNITED WAY TOTAL ABOVE LAST YEAR'S GIVING

The University ended its 1984 United Way campaign with a contribution total of $58,794. While this was $607 above last year's record-setting total, it fell slightly short of this fall's goal of $61,100.

Vice Chancellor Howard Wible, who coordinated the campus effort, expresses appreciation to the 897 active and 36 retired personnel who combined to make the 1984 gift the largest to the Tarrant County United Way effort in TCU history. The county campaign exceeded its goal of $15,586,264 by $55,520 to become the first in the nation to reach its goal this year.

Forty units within the University had 100 percent participation. These were the chancellor's office, athletics, vice chancellor for academic affairs office, graduate studies and research, continuing education, admissions, Honors Program, financial aid, preprofessional advising, University advising, kinesiological studies, counselor education, secondary education, reading development, Starpoint School, Upward Bound, fine arts dean's office, Harris College of Nursing, vice chancellor for student and administrative services office, Affirmative Action, personnel and physical plant administration. Also the dean of students office, Counseling Center, Career Planning and Placement, international student recreation, student activities, campus police, Student Center, University Ministries, vice chancellor for finance and planning office, associate vice chancellor for resource management office, Management Information Systems, business services office, telephone office, use of facilities office, vice chancellor for University relations and development office, the development office and alumni affairs office.

HALLOWEEN PARTY OFFERS TREATS FOR CHILDREN

Colby Residence Hall and Student Activities are sponsoring a Halloween night party for the children of staff and faculty members. The party is tomorrow from 6 to 8 p.m. in the lobby of Colby and will have treats for children of all ages as well as their parents. It's a safe way for everyone to enjoy the holiday.

YEARBOOKS SHOULD BE RESERVED NOW

Faculty or staff members interested in reserving a copy of the 1985 Feature, the yearbook published through Programming Council, should pick up an order blank in the Student Activities Office. Deadline for orders is Nov. 15, and no extra copies will be printed. The 120-page yearbook, selling for $11, will contain individual pictures of seniors as well as photos of major campus activities.

WACKER RECEIVES NEW SEVEN-YEAR CONTRACT

Coach Jim Wacker's rapid turnaround of the Frogs' football program was recognized last week when Chancellor Bill Tucker extended the coach's contract on the basis of his "obvious success and his total commitment to integrity." Announced Oct. 25, the agreement replaces the original four-year pact that Jim signed in December, 1982. A salary increase is included among noteworthy changes outlined in the new contract.

"Coach Wacker's extraordinary impact on the entire football program, the University, the community and beyond far exceeds his wins and losses," noted the chancellor in announcing the decision, recommended by athletic director Frank Windegger. "There are other 5-1 football coaches who could not have accomplished what he has with this program."

TCU's meteoric rise on the gridiron this season has been widely chronicled from coast to coast. Leading the nation in virtually every offensive category except passing and with the best start in 26 seasons prior to the Baylor game, TCU has proved to be one of the most explosive teams on the NCAA scene this fall.

Noting that the new contract represents "our firm commitment to reach the goals we set for ourselves almost two years ago," Chancellor Tucker emphasized that "our goal is to prove beyond question that success and integrity in intercollegiate athletics can fit together. Indeed, in my view, good education and competitive football should enhance each other in the life and work of this University.

"Intercollegiate football today needs good role models," Dr. Tucker added. "When we complete the turnaround of our program at TCU, as we shall, it will have national significance far beyond scoreboards, turnstiles and bumper stickers. We will have set an example for football and universities and coaches and players and fans across the land.

"No one on campus presumes that this goal is easy to attain," the chancellor added. "But Jim Wacker can get the job done. And he will."

FACULTY ART SHOW OPENS NOV. 6

Works of ten art faculty members will be shown Nov. 6-30 in Moudy Building exhibition space. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Included will be sculpture by Harry Geffert, paintings by McKie Trotter, prints by Linda Guy, ceramics by Beth Thomas, photos by Luther Smith, oil on canvas by Ron Watson, works by Margie Adkins, Michael Murray, Kathie Walker Robinson and the acrylic works on laminated paper which won for David Conn a gold medal in the International Art Competition staged in Los Angeles last summer in conjunction with the Olympics.

Three of David's works were in the triptych form, and the fourth was created of four panels in the shape of a T, a shape which gains a human flavor from its configuration, David believes.

INFORMATION SOUGHT ON SCIENTIFIC EVENTS

Information regarding science-related and Fort Worth-based meetings to be hosted by or participated in by faculty members is being sought by the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The calendar of information, gathered from institutions across the nation, will be provided national media representatives by AAAS in an effort to gather more attention to these programs.

The TCU News Service will provide information from the campus community to AAAS. Due in the News Service office by Nov. 6, this information should include the organizations' name, date, time and place of meetings and contact person on campus along with his/her mailing address and phone number.

TWO ALUMNI RECEIVE NATIONAL ATTENTION

TCU was the only institution in the state represented earlier this month in Washington, DC, when five persons were honored as the 1984 Recognized Young Dietitians of the Year. Two of the five honorees--Gayle Thomason Barrick of Fort Worth and Patricia Lynn Doyle of San Antonio--are TCU graduates.

Both were members of the University's first group selected for its Coordinated Undergraduate Program in Dietetics. When TCU inaugurated its program in 1975, it became the fourth university-related one in the state. Home economics majors who complete the two-year specialized program are eligible for membership in the American Dietetic Association, which administers the examination to receive the designation Registered Dietitian. Both Gayle and Patricia hold that accreditation.

The honors were presented formally during the national meeting of the American Dietetic Association.

Formerly of Weatherford, Gayle is a consultant dietitian in the Fort Worth/Dallas area. She has been a director of the Texas Dietetics Association board and has held various offices in the Fort Worth District Dietetic Association. In receiving the award, she was cited for her work "to promote scientifically based nutrition information by serving as a speaker for numerous community and professional groups...and as a lecturer for various community health agencies."

Patricia, a medical sales representative for the nutritional division of Mead Johnson, also has been a TDA board director and currently is program chairman for the TDA annual meeting. She has been active on the TDA state advisory and public relations committees. Holder of a variety of positions in the San Antonio District Dietetic Association, she was recognized for her work "to promote scientifically based nutrition information as a lecturer for various community groups and as a guest on TV talk shows."

Present for the AHE presentation in Washington was nutrition specialist Nell Robinson, one of the founders of TCU's dietetics program.

'IMAGE OF NURSING' IS INSTITUTE THEME

"The Image of Nursing: Strategies for Change" is the theme for the annual Lucy Harris Linn Nursing Institute that will be held on campus Thursday.

Featured speaker will be Sister Rosemary Donley, dean of the School of Nursing at Catholic University of America in Washington. A registered nurse and holder of the Ph.D. degree, the speaker is past president of Sigma Theta Tau, national nursing honor society.

The annual institute, begun in 1976 by District 3 of the Texas Nurses' Association, honors the late Dr. Linn, founding dean of TCU's Harris College of Nursing. She held that position for 21 years before retiring in 1967. A national leader in nursing practice and education, she died in 1981. Her book, "The Harris College of Nursing," was issued by the TCU Press in 1973.

WACKER SHOW GETS FOUR-STAR RATING

"From coach-to-coach, show's the same" was the headline for the lead sports story in the Dallas Morning News on Oct. 19. Complementing the feature was a four-column color photo of Coach Jim Wacker displaying the "TCU unbeleevable!" banner that he showed on his Oct. 14 television program.

The feature story took a close look, some of it tongue-in-cheek, at the TV programs of the Southwest Conference coaches. "If you've seen one, you may have seen enough. Or you may be hooked on them forever," wrote Cathy Harasta of the News. "On the whole, college football coaches' weekly television shows get dismal ratings, closely resemble each other and may induce a deep sleep more safely than pills and with fewer calories than Ovaltine."

"But the truth is," she continued, "coach shows occupy a rarefied spot in TV because they are among the few programs that harbor no delusions of broadening an already targeted, admittedly limited, emotionally loyal audience. With the exception of TCU coach Jim Wacker's program--which has no host and is filmed outdoors at Amon G. Carter Stadium instead of a 2-chair, 1-table set backed by the school colors--coach shows do not place a premium on originality or format. Nor are they for art's sake."

The lengthy story, in addition to noting why such shows exist, took a closer view of several of the weekly viewings. It pointed out that of the four Sunday night shows--TCU, Texas, A&M and Baylor--Wacker's show outrates the others carried by Channel 11 with a 4-plus rating according to Arbitron compared to 1s and 2s by the others. More than 58,000 area homes tune in to the Horned Frog mentor.

Of these four programs along with those of Rice, Houston and Texas Tech, only TCU's received a four-star rating. About it, the Dallas News said: "What's next? Wacker singing in the shower? Telling you the answer to the riddle of life? Who knows? Derring-do and nonconformity give this show its edge. The set is the great outdoors, TCU's Amon Carter Stadium, actually. The show has no cumbersome host, an omission worth a full rating point. Lee Martin Production takes trouble with the look of the program, and it's time well-spent. Besides, watching Wacker can do wonders for a bad mood. Is all that goodwill for real? Doesn't matter."

NOTES ON FOLKS

STEPHANIE WOODS and LISA FUSILLO (ballet) represented TCU at the National Association of Schools of Dance conference in Albuquerque, NM, in late September. Earlier in the month, Stephanie arranged for ballet majors Gaye Frizzell and Edmond Cooper and theatre majors Ovella Hall and Karen Price to perform for Hulén Mall's Salute to TCU Day.

STEVE WILSON, doctoral student in English, has an essay on "High School, College, and the Job of the Freshman Writing Teacher" in the fall issue of English in Texas.

At the Southwest Regional Conference on English in Oklahoma City Oct. 11-13, doctoral student NANCY PRICE read a paper, "The Ethos of the Successful Teacher: Aristotle to Corder," to the session on Philosophical Consideration of Teaching English.

A number of TCU persons participated in the 63rd annual Conference of the Texas Association of the College Registrars and Admissions Officers (TACROA) held Nov. 4-7 in Dallas. Admissions dean NED BOEHM, TACROA vice president, was program coordinator. Others on the program were AL YOUNG and ROSEMARY DROLLINGER (admissions), LEO MUNSON (financial aid) and AL MLADENKA (international students).

AL MLADENKA (International Student Affairs) is taking off for two weeks in Germany on a study tour sponsored by the Carl Duisberg Society. The tour, from Thursday through Nov. 15, is scheduled to include stops at Cologne, Dusseldorf, Berlin, Munich and Heidelberg. Visits will be made to Carl Duisberg headquarters in Cologne, to ministries in Bonn, to universities and institutions as well as to the Bayer Corporation, one of the world's largest chemical companies.

A review of Robert Gish's biography of the writer/artist Paul Horgan by FRED ERISMAN (English) has been published in the Autumn, 1984, issue of the Western Humanities Review. Horgan's watercolor field sketches, which he used in preparing "Great River" and "Lamy of Santa Fe," will be exhibited at the Amon Carter Museum in late November.

LYNN RHOADES (education) attended a Newspaper in Education Seminar Oct. 8-11 in Warrenton, VA. The seminar, sponsored by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, concerned effective ways to use the newspaper to teach elementary and secondary school subjects.

BOB BOATLER (business) presented a paper on "Japan-Latin America-United States-Latin America: A Comparison of Evolving Trade and Investment Relationships" at the annual meeting of the Business Association of Latin American Studies in Seeley Lake, MN, Sept. 27-30.

ARNOLD BARKMAN and SANO A HENSLEY (both accounting) attended a seminar on accounting education held Oct. 19 in Dallas. The seminar was sponsored by the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants (TSCPA). Sanoa is a member of TSRPA's committee on accounting education.

The article entitled "Job-Related Perceptions of Male and Female Government, Industrial, and Public Accountants" has been published in Social Behavior and Personality. Authors at TCU are JOHN TOULIATOS (home economics) and ARNOLD BARKMAN (accounting). Co-authors from Auburn are Art Bedeian and Kevin Mossholder.
