TCU TO HOST HUMANITIES STUDY

Forty elementary school teachers from throughout the United States will study Plato and Aristotle on campus this summer as a result of a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The grant, awarded to the School of Education, was one of only 13 such NEH awards for 1985.

Purpose of the July 8-Aug. 3 institute, to be directed by Bill Vanderhoof, is to improve the ability of teachers to integrate the humanities into the curriculum of the elementary school. The fourth-through sixth-grade teachers include 10 from the Fort Worth Independent School District and others from Washington, California, Massachusetts, Virginia, North Carolina, Montana, New Jersey, Arizona, Connecticut, Oklahoma and the District of Columbia. The grant award pays travel expenses, room and board, books and necessary supplies and an $800 stipend for each teacher.

Bill, who has taken extensive graduate work in the area of philosophy and has served as a humanities coordinator for projects funded by the Texas Commission for the Humanities, points out, "If one believes the study of humanities should lie at the core of the curriculum and the elementary teacher is crucial in determining the quality of our young people's education, then the elementary teacher should be immersed in the study of humanities." Since elementary school teachers usually do not receive intensive education in humanities, such institutes as this one offer a partial resolution to this problem. Participants will study works that illustrate the Socratic teaching method and set forth Plato's and Aristotle's views on significant questions in the area of logic, ethics and politics. The staff also will assist the elementary teachers in preparing curricular material in the areas of reading, social studies, language arts and science.

Other faculty members will include historian Jim Chambers, who teaches Greek and Roman history and whose doctoral dissertation was in the area of ancient Greece; Daryl Schmidt of religion-studies, whose doctoral studies at the University of California included Plato and ancient Greek religion and whose dissertation on Greek grammar has been published; and Ron B. Rembert of Texas Wesleyan College, whose doctoral study focused on the Socratic method as portrayed in three of Plato's dialogues. As part of a follow-up program, institute staff members will visit the participants' schools and will have a series of activities during the next academic year.

SOME 30 PERCENT MORE STUDENTS SEEK HOUSING

Some 30 percent more new students are seeking campus housing for the coming fall than did a year ago, according to a residence hall status report issued June 6 by housing director Don Mills. He noted, too, that a number of cancellations prior to the June 1 cancellation deadline had occurred as anticipated.

When compared to a year ago, applications have increased in all categories except for returning women, which is down 3.7 percent from this time in 1984. The increases include 3.7 percent for returning male students; transfer males, 18.6 percent; and transfer female students, 33.9 percent.

As expected, the significant increases are in freshman applications. Freshman male applications have increased 37.8 percent (125 students), and freshman female applications are up 25 percent (113 students). Overall, new student applications have increased almost 30 percent.

The impact of this large increase on student housing will be significant, Don noted. It indicates that there will not be housing available for returning and transfer students who applied for housing after the May I deadline. "We will attempt to house all freshman applications, although this will require some triple rooms and other adjustments in housing configurations," he explained.

Reservations for 750 students for upcoming orientation sessions further confirm an increased freshman class.

KICKAPOO EFFORT TOTALS MORE THAN 12 TONS

The Kickapoo Indian food and clothing drive held on campus in May was an overwhelming success. According to the Campus Ministries office, more than 12 tons (25,000 lbs.) of food and clothing were donated by the TCU community, increasing the total donated over last year by 15,000 pounds. Donations of imperishable goods will continue to be accepted through the Campus Ministries office. d

PRINTING & MAILING CLOSES FOR RENOVATION

The Printing & Mailing Office closed Friday for a month-long renovation project. Until its re-opening July 15, all printing orders should be taken to Room 14, the office for use of facilities, to be scheduled for printing.

Since printing is being done off campus now, advance planning is even more important than usual during this time, according to director Aletha Lambert. "There will be no same—day service," she added.

Equipment is set up in the hallway for walk-up copying, and servicing the mail in Room 13 is continuing as usual.

Phone inquiries to Printing & Mailing can be made to Ext. 7838 or Ext. 5064.

JUNE 29 SET FOR UPWARD BOUND REUNION

Upward Bound, a federally-funded program for high school students that is designed to generate skills and motivation necessary for success in higher education, will hold its first reunion for former participants and staff members June 29. The 9 a.m. to noon reception will be held in the Student Center.

"More than 450 high school students have taken advantage of the TCU program since its beginning in 1970, and we hope that as many of them as possible will be able to attend the reception," said Charles Latham, director of TCU Upward Bound.

During the academic year, students and faculty tutor Upward Bound participants. The summer program includes an intensive educational curriculum of writing, science, math, computer programming, reading and a lecture series.

FLORIDA STUDENT RECEIVES WALLACE AWARD

Michael Lawrence Comiskey of Tampa, FL, is the recipient of the 1985-86 Anna B. Wallace Scholarship. The selection of the May graduate of Tampa's private Jesuit High School was announced by admissions dean Ned Boehm.

Given annually to the student recognized by the admissions office as having the best all-around record and qualities of any student approved for entering the University that year, the scholarship was established in 1983 to honor Anna Byrd. The TCU alumna was a member of the University's staff from 1958, when she was named associate dean of admissions, until her retirement as dean in 1976. The award of $500 is made in recognition of the recipient's "efforts to attend TCU, excellence in academics and leadership in the person's school and community," according to financial aid director Leo Munson.

Michael has an outstanding academic record and has been active in theatre, forensics and music performance/competition. He also writes for and is an editor of school publications. Planning on majoring in theater, he has been a member of the National Forensics League for four years, has been a member of the Jesuit Choral Ensemble and for four years was a delegate to the State Congress. During the last two years, he took part in the manifold theatre classes at the University of South Florida's Theatre Center. In addition to part-time jobs, he has been active in community service projects.
