

V O G U E

NINETEEN WEST FORTY FOURTH STREET

NEW YORK CITY

CONDÉ NAST
PUBLISHER

EDNA WOOLMAN CHASE
EDITOR

June 30, 1924.

Dear Mr. Carter:

I have placed the entire facilities of our London editorial office (at Aldwych House, just off the Strand, where we publish Vogue as a British periodical) at the call of the American delegation during their stay in London.

The staff of the British edition of Vogue are waiting to be of any possible service to you. Our shopping and travel bureau, and hotel registry can help you shop at the right places, plan independent sight-seeing or play-going, make reservations, or buy transportation for you.

If you plan to go to Paris, the same services (theatres, hotels, shopping, etc.) await you at the offices of Vogue, at No. 2 Rue Edouard VII, where we publish Vogue in the French language.

This letter will serve as an introduction to the executives in both of these offices.

Sincerely yours,

Condé Nast