

Envy

LS 2500
Feb. 5, 1929.

Dear Sir,

In answer to your questions:

- (1) I am a critic of the conventions of my class, not a rebel.
I was, as a young man, a keen sportsman; from the age of about 35, the revolt of my instincts made me give up blood sports. But I doubt if I am entitled to indulge in propaganda against them.

No. 2 is correct.

No. 3 substantially so.

I write ~~solely~~ to promote understanding & general enlightenment, rather than for any particular purposes.

Yours very truly

W. J. Falworth

JOHN GALSWORTHY, A. L. S., 5 February 1929, to unidentified correspondent.

En voyage. [slanted]

Feb. 5, 1929.

Dear Sir,

In answer to your questions: (1) I am a critic of the conventions of my class, not a rebel. I was, as a young man, a keen sportsman; from the age of about 35, the revolt of my instincts made me give up blood sports. But I doubt if I am entitled to indulge in propaganda against them.

[p. 2] No. 2 is correct.

No. 3 substantially so.

I write solely [this word scored through heavily] to promote understanding & general enlightenment, rather than for any particular purposes.

Yours very truly

John Galsworthy

[flourish]

ALS, 2 pages. Double sheet, 17.5 x 12.7 cm.

Lined wove paper. No watermark.

Provenance: In an envelope of Maurice Inman, Inc., 620 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Envelope inserted in A Modern Comedy, 1929 (numbered and signed edition—no. 975 of 1030 copies).

Unpublished.

Notes: 1. Galsworthy was writing, presumably, from Lisbon: he and his wife arrived in Portugal on 3 February and were on the point of departure for Biarritz.

2. Here published by permission of The Society of Authors, 84 Drayton Gardens, London S.W.10.

From page 39 of Kendall, 1970