PENNSYLVANIA PUBLISHERS ELECT E. A. SWEENY AT HARRISBURG MEETING

Series of Addresses Emphasize Responsibility of Newspapers as Guardians of Public Welfare-Association

Groups Meet

E. A. SWEENY, publisher of the Greensburg Tribune-Review, was elected president of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association at the annual meeting held in Harrisburg Lan 27-28 Walter Sanborn Langdale by the Aeolian Ouartet of Wilkes-Barre the annual meeting held in Harrisburg, Jan. 27,28. Walter Sanborn, Lansdale North Penn Reporter, was elected vice president, and Harry Reynolds, Quarry-ville Sun, secretary-treasurer. The small country newspaper does more to mould the sentiment of the na-tion than any other agency, Governor Fisher told the publishers at the session Friday. A general forum on "The Mak-ing of a Newspaper" was held Friday morning. It was presided over by E. J. Lynett, of the Scranton Times. George E. Graff, of the Williamsport Sun, Gazette and Bulletin, argued for newspaper protection of public utility users. He said the laws have become so involved that the individual is com-paratively helpless against the array of so involved that the individual is com-paratively helpless against the array of legal talent engaged in the construction of present day financial structures. George B. Parker, editor-in-chief of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, em-phasized the responsibility of newspapers to the 95 per cent of the public which needs their guardianship. He urged the editors to scan anew the bill of rights and re-dedicate themselves to the safe-guarding of the public welfare.

guarding of the public welfare. Technical problems of newspaper pro-duction were discussed at the afternoon meetings. Dr. William T. Ellis, lecturer, ad-dressed the publishers at the annual ban-quet. He decried the prominence with which crime news is displayed in the newspapers, stating that every editor can for newspaper more worthwhile news in his own locality. He also advocated better pay for newspaper men. He said he thought they were more poorly paid than minis-

Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, declared that the government cannot operate business as well as private individuals. At the Saturday morning meeting more problems of newspaper building

At the Saturday morning meeting more problems of newspaper building were dealt with, particularly advertising rates. Editors and publishers of Asso-ciated Press member newspapers and clients of the United Press met separately at luncheon. The following members of the execu-clients of the United Press met separately at luncheon.

The following members of the executive committee were chosen:
District No. 1, daily, J. H. Zerbey, Pottsville Republican; weekly, H. B. Heywood, Conshohocken Recorder. District No. 2, daily, Col. E. G. Smith, Wilkes-Barre Times Leader; weekly, B. R. Gardner, Montrose Independent. District No. 3, daily, H. W. Young, York Dispatch; weekly, H. E. Trout, Manheim Sentinel. District No. 4, daily, G. A. Stewart, Clearfield Progress; weekly, Marion S. Schoch, Selinsgrove Times. District No. 5, daily, C. M. Bomberger, Jeannette News-Dispatch; weekly, W. S. Livengood, Meyersdale Republican. District No. 6, daily, E. T. Stevenson, Titusville Herald; weekly, J. E. Kocher, Zelienople Valley News. Members at large, D. N. Selp, Altoona Mirror; Paul Eyerly, Bloomsburg Press; Charles R. Long, Chester Times.
Talph D. Hetzel, president of Pennsylvania State College, addressing one of the earlier meetings, discussed the place an institution of higher learning should have in a community.
Dr. Hetzel said that the state should provide funds for the setting up of an agency to develop scientific research in the interests of public well-being. Much could be done for industry, great and small, if such an institution were created, he said, as has been done for agency.
Taul R. Eyerly, retiring president of the organization announced that the addition of about 20 members' Associal group of its kind in the country. Entertainment at the annual banquet included music by a jazz orchestra and by the Aeolian Quartet of Wilkes-Barre. Con McCole, humorist, spoke. The Rev. S. W. Herman, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, gave the invo-cation, and the benediction was pro-nounced by the Rev. Joseph R. Murphy, rector of St. Francis' Roman Catholic Church. Church.

8/0

ALL-NEWSPAPER PLAN DECLARED A SUCCESS

McQuiston Will Continue It Through 1928, New York Office of Westinghouse Company Says- Manager Tells Why in Address

J. C. McQuiston, advertising manager of the Westinghouse Electric and Manu-facturing Company, has made it plain that he will continue to follow the "All-Newspaper Advertising Plan" which he started last year. Although, addressing he Advertising Club of New York on Jan. 31. he praised newspapers highly, Mr. McQuiston made no definite an-nouncement regarding 1928, but his New York office professed that for a certainty this year would see continuance of the successful advertising idea. "By placing Westinghouse advertising in the local newspapers of some 400 cities and towns, we are able to give our com-and towns, we are able to give pany a local identity that is very helpful to our salesmen and distributors in the sales of our products within those com-munities," Mr. McQuiston said in his sales of our products within those com-munities," Mr. McQuiston said in his New York address. "It is very nice for the Westinghouse Company to have a reputation of being a fine, substantial organization away out in East Pittsburgh, Pa., but it is much more inducive to immediate sales for the Westinghouse Company to have a local identity right in the town where we are doing our advertising, and, incidentally, our selling." Other points listed by McQuiston, in explaining why advertisers prefer newspapers were Their flexibility; the opportunity they afford for test advertising; the possibili-ties inherent for co-operative tie-in adverties inherent for co-operative tie-in adver-tising; reader interest; instant action; public relations appeal; localizing and nationalizing; the possibility of check-ing results; and the fact that news-paper advertising interests local dealers and obtains full sales support. Regarding reader interest, Mr. Mc-Quiston said: "We have grown into a nation of news-paper readers until today nearly every paper readers until today nearly every worth-while American buys and reads his daily paper. As a result any message in the newspaper comes to the reader fresh and welcome and secures immediate attention."

SOCIETY GIRLS BOOST ROTO SECTION

Junior League in Charge of Special Edition of Hartford (Conn.) Courant March 6-Expected 16 Pages, Have Already Sold 20

A method of promoting its rotogravure section among local merchants and national advertisers is being worked now by the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, of which J. W. Thurston is advertising manager. The local Junior League has been The local Junior League has been promised all revenue from the roto-gravure section to be published March 6, and the society girl members of the society are selling the space. A part of the plan is that members of the Junior League will pose for the advertisement placed in this issue. Letters are being sent out by the girls to national adver-tisers, containing offers to pose using various nationally known products. The original plan was to publish a 16 page section. The girls started work Jan. 3 and already have sold 20 pages. It is expected that the League will raise about $10,000 this way for a local charity.

charity.

In preparing for the stunt, H. H. Con-land, publisher of the Courant, and Mr. Thurston were assisted by J. C. Wilber-ding, vice-president of the Gravure Ser-vice Corporation.

John C. Martin Announces He No Longer Cares to Publish a Tabloid-

To Absorb Staff with Ledgers

-Started May, 1925

John C. Martin, vice-president of the Curtis - Martin Newspapers, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER on Thursday this week that he would discontinue on Satur-day, Feb. 4, publication of the Phila-delphia Sum morning tabloid, which was week that he would discontinue on Satur-day, Feb. 4, publication of the Phila-delphia Sun, morning tabloid, which was founded in May, 1925, after Cyrus H. K. Curtis purchased and suspended the Philadelphia North American. "Our feeling is," Mr. Martin said, "that tabloids as a whole have been given such a bad reputation among readers and advertisers that we no longer care to publish one." With this terse comment ends an ex-periment in conservative tabloid jour-nalism. The slogan of the Sun was: "A compact newspaper for busy people." It was well illustrated, but was always first of all a newspaper, content to play down sensationalism.

sensationalism. In the first issue, Philadelphia readers were saluted with a statement, reading in were saluted with a statement, reading in part: "The Sun, as you can see, now that it phia and the world in general is a prom-ise that it will resolutely try to deserve its name. It will toil to shine cheerfully and to make all things of importance brightly visible. "The Sun, as you can se, now that it is in your hand, is designed to be a paper for busy men and women who may find pleasure or benefit or both in a swift sur-vev of the world's doings every morning.

is in your hand, is designed to be a part for busy men and women who may find pleasure or benefit or both in a swift sur-vey of the world's doings every morning. Briefly and briskly it will tell all the facts and leave out as much of the writ-ing as can be spared." David E. Smiley now general manager of the North American Newspaper Alli-ance was the first editor-in-chief of this Philadelphia tabloid. The original circu-lation in 1925 was some 9,000, after re-turns had been disallowed, and in a year this figure was boosted to 70,000. The last A.B.C. statement gave it a circula-tion of 96,164, which, with the exception of the Sunday Item and the Sunday Transcript, was the lowest circulation of all Philadelphia papers. "Bernart MacFadden has a tabloid in Philadelphia, the News, with a circula-tion of 136,876. The News started pub-lication two months before the Sun, in March, 1925. H. B. Nason, Jr., has been managing editor of the Sun since it was started. Robert Clark was city editor and Joseph McGlynn, sporting editor. Business and advertising were handled by the business office of the Curtis Martin Newspapers. Mr. Martin said the staff of the Sun would be absorbed by the Philadelphia Public Ledger and Evening Public Led-ger.

ger.

TELLS AGENCY WHY

Lynchburg News Replies to Criticism of Its News Policy

When the Lynchburg (Va.) News re-ceived a telegram from Lennen & Mitchell, advertising agents, recently, ex-pressing "surprise and disappointment" that the Old Gold airplane was not given more publicity than it received when it passed over Lynchburg, the advertising manager, M. K. Duerson, replied as follows

"The business office of this newspaper assumes no control or interference in the editorial department and we assume that the editorial department gave such pub-licity in the news columns as the editor considered it deserved. "In this connection we are at a loss to understand why manufacturers desert the generally accepted advertising mediums ums in favor of the spectacular and bizarre and then acknowledge their small faith by expecting the newspapers to give their space free of charge in orde-to make that type of advertising effec-

AT MERCY OF LORD ROTHERMERE'S PRESS

Lord Rothermere, titled British publisher, wore a cowboy outfit and carried a six shooter during his recent visit to the ranch of Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth StarTelegram and Record-Telegram. In the picture are (left to right): H. M. Magendie, mailing room superintendent, Star-Telegram; L. E. Phillips, vice-president and general manager, Phillips Petroleum Com-pany, Bartlesville, Okla.; James Heddle (hand raised); E. Cameron (the hold-up victim); E. Outhwaite, secretary to, Lord Rothermere; G. L. Warden, managing editor, Paris Mail; Amon G. Carter; Lord Rothermere (with pistol); (obscured and without hat) Frank W. Clarke; G. Ward Price.