Vigily, I feel obliged to answer all my queries and speculations, but there is one favor I will ask of you. I have encountered a very nice stony meteorite at Waco; it wll probably be given to Baylor (curses!). But the finder is dead and its history is unknown. I think I have established that it was found near Turkey, Texas over 20 years ago but even those facts are uncertain.

The man who owned the stone was a friend of Mr. Curtis Tunnell, an archaeologist, and the last address I have been able to get on him is c/o Historical Survey Commission, Box 12276, Capital Station, Austin, Tx., 78711, but a letter addressed there month ago has brought no response.

Could you try to locate this archaeologist for me, either thru some one at the University or thru the Historical Commission? I am anxious to get his address and/or phone number so I can ask him whe ther he knows anything about this meteorite. I think it is an ordinary chondrite, but it is relatively well preserved and I don't think hadlain in the open very long.

Best Christmas wishes to you and to Milla.

Sincerely,

frank of letter 12/10/72
