Dear Mrs. Hinrichs:

I shall be coming thru St. Louis on my way to New York by train on the morning of Saturday, Feb. 14th, and will have an hour or two between trains. I shall take the liberty of phoning you at that time.

I am interested to learn what you have finally located in the way of the meteorite collections, and whether you found the smaller specimens that I remember having seen over at the laboratory.

If you cared to have me do so, I could perhaps make a quick trip out to your house or to the laboratory to offer my assistance in checking or identifying any of the specimens. I could probably do this even better on my return journey, when I will be thru St. Louis on Sunday afternoon, February 12th.

I would be glad to hear from you in the meantime if anything has developed regarding these meteorites. Not hearing from you in the fall, I hesitated to worry you. I realize now it might be as much too cold to investigate these comfortably as it was too hot last summer! I have some hopes you have checked up and got them all together by now.

With kindest regards, I am

Yours sincerely,
