

KIRBYVILLE METEORITE

Compare Farrington, p. 196, under Forest City, where in a quotation from Kunz, he says of those stones:

"The stone is porous, and when it is placed in water to ascertain its specific gravity, there is considerable ebullition of air."

Or were these occluded gases in the meteorite being replaced by the water in the case of the Kirbyville piece?