CREATIVE WRITING EVENTS BEGIN TODAY

TCU can be proud of the many fine events its students and faculty present during the year. From Howdy Week to Homecoming, Honors Week to Fine Arts Festival, the semesters are full with activities which demonstrate the breadth and depth of university life on our campus.

Among the most significant annual occasions are the Creative Writing Events which begin this evening and continue through tomorrow. At 8 o'clock tonight Dr. Nathan A. Scott Jr., chairman of theology and literature of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, will present the Cecil B. Williams Lecture in American Literature. Dr. Scott will speak on "The 'Conscience' of the New Literature, Or, Between Antioch and Alexandria." Dean Jerome Moore will preside and Dr. Glenn Routt of Brite will introduce the speaker.

Tomorrow at 11 a.m. the Creative Writing Convocation will be held in Ed Landreth Auditorium. Dr. William Owens, professor of creative writing and director of summer sessions at Columbia University, will speak on "Walter Mitty and Other Fantasy Makers." He'll be introduced by Dr. Fred Erisman of the English Department. Dr. John Warren Smith, also of English, will preside. The creative writing publication of award winning student writing will be distributed.

The Awards Luncheon will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Student Center with English Chairman Dr. Jim Corder presiding. To be honored are Drs. Scott and Owens, Mrs. J. Frank Dobie, prize winners, donors, judges and special guests. Dr. James Newcomer will extend the welcome. A highlight of the luncheon is the awarding of prizes which include awards for poetry, short story, drama, non-fiction, literature for children, narrative or fact, fiction, plus several special honors.

The day will conclude with an Autograph Reception in the Student Center lounge at 3-4:30 p.m. honoring the speakers, special guests and prize winners. DIRECTOR NAMED FOR NEW PASTORAL CARE AND TRAINING CENTER

Charles H. Sanders II, associate minister of University Christian Church since 1964, has accepted an appointment as director of the new Pastoral Care and Training Center of Brite Divinity School, effective Sept. 1. The center is planned to be a service to both the public and area pastors and to provide advanced training in pastoral care for graduate students in Brite. Initially, the center will operate in facilities provided by University Christian Church.

The center, with Dr. Charles Kemp of Brite serving as pastoral supervisor, will provide counseling services for laymen who are referred by their ministers as well as for non-church members who may seek help in solving personal, social and spiritual problems that normally would be within the responsibility of a congregation's minister. It will be open for members of all denominations and all faiths and will provide religious counseling also for TCU undergraduates, Brite students and their wives.

Sanders earned his B.A. from Texas Tech and his B.D. and M.Th. from Brite. He's active in the General Ministers Assn. and serves on the pastoral care committee of the Fort Worth Council of Churches and on the board of the Family Service Assn.

PR DIVISION WINS AWARDS

The University's Division of Public Relations received three awards at the southwest district convention of the American College Public Relations Assn. held in San Antonio last month. A certificate of exceptional merit was awarded the division in the cooperative news stories classification for its entry on "Project Change." The entry was submitted by News Bureau Director Betty Knox.

John Ohendalski, research news editor, received a certificate of merit for his entry in specialized news stories on "Human Personality--Key to New Cures." Two publications were included among the awards: A development folder for Brite Divinity School earned a certificate of merit; and the booklet for the inaugural luncheon honoring Mr. & Mrs. M. J. Neeley and the naming of the M. J. Neeley School of Business earned a certificate of special merit. Both were designed by Fred McDonald, director of publications.

RESERVATIONS DUE FOR CANDLELIGHT DINNER

Today (May 8) is the deadline for making reservations for the annual TCU Faculty Candlelight Dinner. The occasion, which is scheduled for next Wednesday (May 15) at 7 p.m. in the Student Center ballroom, is one of the special social events of the year.

This is the occasion when we pay tribute to those who are retiring and give recognition to the ROTC faculty who are being reassigned or retired from active military service. We'll also recognize those of our Evening College faculty who are retiring after many years of part-time service to the University.

There aren't too many times during the year when the faculty is urged to dress formal, but this is one of those times. It's not required, of course (except for those at the head table), but it gives you a good excuse to wear one of those elegant brocade purple dinner jackets. Most of us, being a bit more on the conservative side, will probably stick to the traditional black.

Remember: If you've received an invitation, but have not R.S.V.P.'d, call Ina Rivers Jarman today at Ext. 262. Cost is $3.25 each.

BIOMEDICAL SCIENCE GRANT RECEIVED ✓

A $39,930 grant for biomedical science support from the National Institutes of Health, Department of Research Facilities and Resources, has been received by TCU. According to Dr. Leigh Secrest, head of the TCU Research Foundation, the funds will be used to support faculty and student research in health related sciences and to support several projects. The one-year grant will be effective June 1.

NOW IS TIME TO ADD EVENTS TO 1968-69 CALENDAR

A copy of the first draft of the 1968-69 University Calendar is enclosed with this issue of the Faculty Bulletin. Be sure to take a careful look at the dates and activities listed. If you see any errors or if you know of events that should be included, call these to the attention of Elizabeth Proffer, Ext. 341, right away.

The calendar must be in final form and be ready for the printers within the next few weeks so delivery can be made in the fall. With so many of our faculty away during the summer, now is the best time to make corrections or additions.

FACULTY SENATE ELECTS OFFICERS ✓

At its first meeting, May 6, the newly-formed Faculty Senate elected John Haltom, professor of government, as chairman; Jim Corder, English department chairman, as vice chairman; Richard Douthit, associate professor of speech, as secretary; Harold Lunger, professor of Christian ethics in Brite, as assistant secretary. They will serve for a one year term.

The formation of a Faculty Assembly and Senate was approved by the University Board of Trustees at their spring meeting. The Assembly is made up of elected representatives on the basis of one representative for each fifteen faculty members, according to college or school, and fourteen members who are elected at large. Total membership of the Senate is 36 (34 elected, with the chancellor and vice chancellor for academic affairs as ex-officio members).

Those elected as representatives in the Senate are: AddRan College of Arts & Sciences -- for two years: Paul Wassenich, John Haltom, Jim Corder, Art Ehlmann, Malcolm Arnoult; for one year: Frank Reuter, Bita May Hall, Jerry Michel, John Wortham, Floyd Durham, and Bobby Sanders.

School of Fine Arts -- for two years: Richard Douthit; for one year: George Tade and R. C. Norris. School of Education -- for two years: Jeff Horn; for one year: Ben Strickland. Neeley School of Business -- for two years: Ken Herrick; for one year: Allen Self. Brite Divinity School -- for two years: Harold Lunger; for one year: Jack Suggs. The Assembly meets at least twice a year and on call by the chancellor, vice chancellor for academic affairs or the chairman of the Faculty Senate. The Senate meets in October, December, February, May and on call. Only fulltime faculty members with the rank of instructor or higher are eligible to vote for Senators. Instructors must have been at TCU for three years and assistant professors must have been at the University for two years to be eligible to vote. Terms of office for those elected are two years with one half of the members of the Senate retiring each year. Those eligible for election are those eligible to vote who hold the rank of assistant professor or higher.

NEWS AND VIEWS ABOUT HIGHER EDUCATION

Differences in meaning of civil disobedience, protest and dissent were recently spelled out by Earl Morris, president of the American Bar Assn., speaking at Syracuse University's College of Law: "We have reached a point in the life of our nation when there arises an imperative need for the full acceptance of the rule of law as an essential doctrine and for a rebirth of civil obedience." Morris defines civil disobedience "as the open, willfull breaking, by an individual or a group, of a law which that individual or group believes to be unfair or unjust with a view toward effecting its change, or the committing of a similarly unlawful act in order to influence government policy." "Dissent," says Morris, "is the legal expression of one's nonconcurrence with a generally prevailing opinion, usually by means of the spoken or written word; while protest is the legal expression of objection, disapproval or opposition, more often in the form of some type of action..."

Speaking about civil disobedience, Morris says "What the persons who participate in these lawless acts seem to have forgotten is that, though their techniques might be effective for the moment, they are self-defeating because they endanger the same individual freedom they are intended to manifest...The concept of civil disobedience has been distorted in these times to justify violence and anarchy. These people are not attempting to change a law or influence government policy; they are expressing, in a violent manner, their distaste with 'the way things are being run'; they are using civil disobedience as a pressure technique and as an almost instinctive response to any grievance, real or imagined. This is not genuine civil disobedience: it is wanton, reckless use of 'muscle,' without order, without logic, without intelligence."

"Perhaps the most significant application of the rule of law," said Morris, "is the concept that each of us must comply with the law if we are to have an ordered society in which rights and responsibilities are concomitants. An ordered society cannot survive--and ours, strong as it is, will not survive--if each individual may determine which laws he will obey, and may with impunity flout those which he finds distasteful." (Amer. Council on Education, Higher Education and Nat'l Affairs, April 19.)

The five and one-half million non-activist students of a six million total enrollment must "speak out and lend their support to administrators or the few extremists will continue to give the impression that they--and only they--represent the views of those within colleges and universities. And public confidence in higher education will continue to decline," said Paul Woodring in "A View from the Campus" in Saturday Review, Mar. 16. (Amer. Coll. Pub. Rel. Ass., Education Abstracts, April.)

Only 50 percent of young people under 30 take time to vote, according to pollster Louis Harris, in spite of better educations, greater affluence and more grievances than their elders--persons over 50. Among persons over 50, 75 percent are active in the democratic process.--Los Angeles Times, Mar. 8. (Education Abstracts, April.)

SERIES OF SCIENCE FOLDERS COMPLETED

A series of seven folders describing the various science programs at TCU has recently been completed. The colorful and informative pamphlets cover biology, physics, psychology, mathematics, chemistry, geology, and pre-professional programs (pre-medicine, pre-dentistry, pre-engineering and medical technology). A wrap-around cover sheet serves as an envelope for the folders so they may be distributed as a packet.

It's a very handsome and thorough job written by Research Editor John Ohendalski and designed by Publications Director Fred McDonald, both of the public relations staff, in cooperation with our science faculty. They're available in limited quantity from either Admissions or Alumni Affairs.
