MR. BROWN IN A MINING CAMP.

Mrs. Brown having presented her husband with a fine baby boy weighing 12 pounds. In her fillness of her joy could not resist telling the neighbors of the weight of the infant. The news reached the newspaper that Mr. Brown had found a nugget weighing 12 pounds, it being a mining town. A reporter rushed to the home of the family, where the following dialogue ensued.

Does Mr. Brown live here? Yes. Is he at home? No. We hear that he has found a nugget weighing 12 pounds. Mrs. Brown seeing the joke answered yes. Can you show me the spot where the nugget was found? Mrs. Brown blushing said; well I would not care to show it during my husbands absence. Is the claim large? Just large enough to work nicely in. Is the hole far from here? No it's quite near. Has he been working in it very long? Only nine months. Was he the first one to work the hole? He thinks he was. Are the work difficult? At first they were but latter he found it easy. Is water plentiful? Quite sufficient to carry on the work. Has he struck botton yet? Not quite but he came very near it. Does he think there are more nugges to be found in the hole? Yes if it is worked right. Has Mr. Brown worked in the hole since the nugget was found? No, but I told him it was time to begin. Has any person helped him in the work of the claim? No indeed he delights in doing it all himself.

Would you show me the nugget? Mrs. Brown uncovered the baby. the reporter had to be taken home in ambulance.

The End.
