Add-Ran Christian University as a School for Young Ladies.

BELOW are given under twelve heads, some of the strong points of Add-Ran as a school for young ladies.

1. Add-Ran is co-educational. In this she is in harmony with conservative leaders in educational thought. The following from the New York School Journal is terse and representative: "Neither sex develops normally alone. Those who are wisely kept together as far as to the college doorway should not then be separated. Co-education lies directly in the line of human evolution."

2. At Add-Ran young women follow the same high course of study as young men. Of course this requires steadiness of purpose, persistent effort and severe intellectual discipline; but it gives us young women of strong character, positive convictions and clear, sensible views of life. Compare Add-Ran's course of study with that of the exclusively female colleges where the lighter accomplishments rather than solidity of culture constitute the aim.

3. Add-Ran publishes no part of her course of study for mere display. Neither is any part touched lightly simply to seem to conform to the published course. The catalogue is followed literally and in a thorough-going way by scholarly university graduates, hence,

4. The work done in Add-Ran is accepted by such institutions as Texas State University, and the University of Chicago. Add-Ran is also counted as one of the few institutions "of the first class" by the State Board of Education.

5. But we have arranged a teachers' course for those who do not wish to take the longer course leading to the A. B. degree. This course prepares students for first-grade and permanent certificates. The length of time required will vary from one to three years depending upon the advancement and ability of the student. Because this is a teachers' course it will embrace mainly subjects which teachers must teach, which means subjects which everybody ought to study. For this reason it is precisely adapted to others than teachers.

6. Our location is ideal. We are three miles from Waco, the "Central City" of Texas. Street cars for the city pass our doors every fifteen minutes. We have telephone connection with the outside world—all the advantages of both city and rural life with none of their disadvantages, such as cramped surroundings, imperfect ventilation, dust, excessive heat, exposure to contagious diseases. Our site consists of fifteen acres on College Heights, about one hundred feet above the level of the city. As evidence of its healthfulness we have never had a serious case of sickness.

7. Add-Ran's main building is one of the largest, best built, and therefore safest school buildings to be found anywhere. It was erected at an approximate cost of $120,000. It is massive in architecture and well planned as to comfort, health and convenience.

8. We are proud of our new Girls' Home. See the cut on the front page of this folder. It is a model of elegance, comfort and neatness. A furnace for heating and electricity for lights insure safety, promote cleanliness and save trouble and inconvenience. Up to this time, for lack of suitable dormitory accommodations, Add-Ran has felt handicapped in pressing her claims upon young ladies, but now she can speak out boldly. It is doubtful if there is anything in Texas superior to it as a school dormitory for young ladies.

9. Our arrangements are such that young ladies eat, sleep, study, attend recitations during the week and Sunday School and Church services on Sunday without exposure in inclement weather.

10. When the weather permits, they get open air exercise including occasional outings, and daily exercise in physical culture under the instruction and direction of a thoroughly competent and skillful teacher without additional cost.

11. In music, art and oratory and elocution, Add-Ran is fully up with the times.

12. Finally, and most important of all, a cheerful spirit of good will toward everybody characterizes the Add-Ran students. The moral atmosphere is sweet and wholesome and its educational effect as a help to the higher life is immeasurable.

A word to young ladies who are looking for the best school to attend: In the light of the facts set forth above, does not Add-Ran appeal to you on very strong grounds? Does not she offer to you a rare combination of advantages? In how many schools can you find such a combination or its equivalent duplicated? Investigate and see.
