Organ Prelude . . . . . Mr. Price Dunlavey

Rev. Brougher:

Let us pray:

Almighty and eternal God, Thou hast revealed Thyself unto us through Jesus Christ, Thy Son; He has said, "I am the way and the life, I am the resurrection; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." It is in the assurance and comfort of this great promise that we meet today to pay our tribute to one we have all loved who has gone on just a little while ahead of us, and at the same time seek from Thy presence the comfort, the consolation and the strength that will enable us to meet life's problems without his presence with us, and so may Thy peace abide upon us and may Thy spirit make real the presence of the Christ in every sorrowing heart at this hour. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

"Jesus said unto His disciples, Ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto Myself, that where I am, there ye may be also, and whither I go ye know, and the way ye know. Thomas saith unto Him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest, and how can we know the way? Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by Me.

If ye had known Me, ye should have known My Father also, and from henceforth ye know Him, and have seen Him.

If ye love Me, keep My commandments, and I shall pray the Father and He shall give you another Comforter, that He shall abide with you forever, even the Spirit of Truth whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.

I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you."

Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand, by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also first received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the scriptures, and that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day according to the Scriptures.

But some men will say, How are the dead raised up? And with what body do they come?

Thou foolish one, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die, and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain, but God giveth it a body that pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

So also is the resurrection of the dead; it is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body, and as is the earthy, such also are they that are earthy, and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly, and as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

Now this I say, brethren, flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption, but I show you a mystery, We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law.

But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

"And I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep, for the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Rev. Brougher:

Because of the strain upon my own heart cords, I am going to read most of what I have to say today. I am speaking as a friend, trying to evaluate the life of one who cannot be measured by any standard that human life may have.

There are many hills, but only here and there a great towering Mt. Shasta;

There are many streams, but only here and there a great Mississippi;

There are many trees, but only here and there a great
Sequoia gigantea;

There are many echoes, but only now and then an original voice;

There are many musicians, but only now and then a Mendelssohn
or a Mozart;

There are many politicians, but only now and then a great statesman;

There are many people, but only now and then an outstanding individual.

When a great personality suddenly appears, the great world stops in its busy rush to look and listen. The monotony of life is broken for a while, the man who is different has attracted the attention of all. He soon becomes a hero, for men and women bow before a strong and magnetic personality; such has been the unique and commanding position of Will Rogers during the last quarter of a century. He has been the one figure in the life of our nation who has drawn to himself the admiration and the love of all classes of people.

It is no exaggeration to say that no man has been so universally appreciated and loved as Will Rogers. Hence, today, not only an entire nation, but people of all nations around the world mourn his sudden and tragic going from our midst.

Measured by any one of a half dozen standards, one of the very greatest men America has ever produced has gone on a little while ahead of us into that life of greater opportunity and service that Christ has prepared for them who love Him.

Will Rogers was a man with the highest sense of honor; he did not stoop to little tricks to win the favor of men. He was absolutely genuine and sincere. The word "sincere" means without "putty" or "paint." Men use putty and veneer to stop up the cracks and give the appearance of hard wood to that which is not genuine, but Will Rogers never made any pretense; he was just naturally honest, sincere and genuine. Is it any wonder that those who came in touch with him personally and knew him as he was, should give him our hearts' devotion, he was absolutely genuine.

He was pure minded and clean in his thinking. Like a rubber ball bounding on a clean wall, he threw out his thoughts and they rebounded to you without taint or soil upon your heart and soul. He emphasized the teachings of the great Apostle Paul who said, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things." Those are the things upon which Will Rogers thought, and he interpreted them in terms of wit and humor which made them attractive and winsome.

The only time I ever heard him say a rather sharp and caustic thing, was when a speaker at a banquet told a rather doubtful story, and when Will's turn came, he said, "My friend's mind is like a race horse, it runs best on a dirt track." His own soul preferred the things that were clean and bright and helpful, and he found it easy to eschew gossip and scandal and speak words of helpfulness and good cheer. No man ever heard him speak any other words.

He was a man of sympathetic kindness, he understood human nature, he knew its weaknesses and its struggles, he could forgive our sins while he made us laugh at our mistakes. Sometimes a great and strong character stands aloof from mankind, he is as cold as pure ice and as unsympathetic as a mountain of snow, but Will Rogers was wisely human and naturally kind. He had the sympathy of a mother for her child, and the kindness of a friend for a friend.

"Oh, for the subtle touch of his art;

Oh, for the gift of his pen,

Oh, for his smile, just once in a while,

Oh, for his ways among men.

Oh, for the gentle charm of his speech,

Oh, for the powers of his mind -

But, mostly we pray

On this deep-shadowed day,

Just for his grace to be kind."

Will Rogers was a loyal friend and brother. He said in my pulpit at Tremont Temple, Boston, "I joke about everybody, but I never hated a man yet." He had the expression of universal good will. He understood human nature so well that he did not misjudge men and women, he was so thoughtful of others that he would not permit himself to be unkind, unjust or unfriendly.

"I tell you one thing pleases me about this friendly man,
He always says the kindest things about folks that he can,
Perhaps they're gnarled and crooked as a twisted stick o' wood,
But Will, he seems to think that they'd be better if they could.
An' somehow he just makes you feel you'd like to take his hand,
An' try an' walk along o' him towards the Better Land.
Ye know he'd not be hard on ye if ye stumbled now and then -
Perhaps he's had troubles o' his own that makes him feel for men."

He did not have a shadow of intolerance or prejudice in his makeup. He was a brother to all mankind. Like his Master, he "went about doing good" to all classes and races of men; he was never above doing some humble service for the good of others. He had a meek and humble spirit, and fulfilled the word of Jesus, "He that would be greatest among you, let him be servant of all."

The last two times I had the pleasure and privilege of appearing on the platform with him, I was introducing him to do his share for the McKinley Orphan Boys' Home, here in Glendale where an entertainment was given, and then two weeks later for the big Baptist Colored Church when we were raising money for the colored people in Southern California. When drought or flood or earthquake or storm brought suffering and starvation to his fellow men, he gave his service without thought of himself to minister through the Red Cross and other agencies to those who were sick and disconsolate and bereft. His place in the hearts of the people of our nation is absolutely secure because of his great love for humanity, his sacrificing spirit and his helpful ministry to the needs of all mankind.

Will Rogers was preeminently the apostle of good humor. He was a humorist who made fun that was good natured without the sting of acid or the barb of spite. At first we laughed at the best story he had to tell us, then we chuckled and smiled, and sometimes laughed hilariously at the wise cracks he took at politicians and statesmen, sinner and saint, and his bright and witty sayings will be repeated throughout the years to come, and the world will continue to laugh at his repartee and keen, but kindly, philosophy of life. He proved to all men that good humor and wit and smiles and laughter were not out of harmony with the profoundest sincerity, the cleanest conduct and the noblest living. He also demonstrated that merriment goes with Christianity, because to be Christlike is to be happy and kindly, to seek the welfare and happiness of others and to smile while you make others smile.

Will Rogers was the master magician, who with a simple phrase could turn laughter into tears, and tears into laughter.

"Beloved monarch of all wholesome mirth
High priest of joy, apostle of good cheer,
Lover of life, defender of true worth,
Today the world stands silent at your bier.

So brave you were, so noble, good and true!
Your gladness sweetened all our bitter years;
You smiled and all the world smiled after you,
We laughed with you, till laughter died in tears.

May all the tears your friends let fall today,
Unite in one great silver stream of light
To bear your gentle soul upon its way
To that fair land your smile shall make more bright."

These are the words of a newspaper man handed to me yesterday, for our Will loved the things people loved, he loved to make people happy, he loved to bear the burden of others, no wonder they flocked in crowds to see him when he appeared on the stage or platform, for they wanted to know more intimately the man whose voice and writings had cheered them out of their depression and inspired them with higher hopes and ideals. He not only loved the people and loved his friends, but he loved his home. Here was found the finest and the highest expression of his loyalty and devotion to wife and children and home ideals. No wonder he has gained and held the affection of all right-minded and noble men and women.

Little children loved him, the boys and girls loved him, young men and young women loved him, and the old people loved him. He was of us all and for us all, and so in turn we were all for him, and his passing wrenches the chords of every one who has ever heard of him or known him, but we do not mourn as those who are without hope. Jesus and the great Apostle Paul have given to us the great assurance that death does not end life, it is only a transition. Will loved to venture where new things could be learned and greater progress be attained.

If we could see beyond the azure sky into which he loved to fly, I expect that we would know now that he is realizing his fondest dreams to know and do something untried and new.

In a letter which he wrote as an introduction to the book of his friend, Charles M. Russell, the Montana Cowboy Artist, who died before his book was published, Will said:

"There ain't much news to tell you. You know the Big Boss gent sent a hand over and got you so quick, Charley. But I guess He needed a good man pretty bad. I hear they been working short-handed over there pretty much all the time. I guess it is hard for Him to get hold of good men, they are just scarce everywhere.

I bet you Mark Twain and old Bill Nye and Whitcomb Riley and a whole bunch of those old joshers was just a waiting for you to pop in with all the latest ones.

What kind of a fellow was Washington and Jefferson? I bet they are regular fellows when you meet 'em, ain't they? Most big men are.

You will run on to my old dad up there Charley, for he was a real cowhand, and you will pop into some well kept ranch house over under some cool shady trees, and you will be asked to have dinner, and it will be the best one you ever had in your life.

Well, when you are thanking the women folks, you just tell the sweet looking little old lady that you know her boy back on an outfit you used to rep for, and tell the daughters that you knew their brother, and if you see a cute little rascal running around there, kiss him for me.

Well, can't write you any more Charley, darn paper's all wet, it must be raining in this old bunk house.

Of course, we are all just hanging on here as long as we can. I don't know why we hate to go, we know its better there. Maybe it's because we haven't done anything that will live after we are gone."

And my friends, when the Apostle Paul approached the time of his death, he said, "The time of my departure has come." The word "departure" here signifies the launching of a ship. Paul really said, "The time has come for my ship to be launched into the sea for which it was created." He also said, "It is far better to be absent from the body and be at home with the Lord." He did not look upon death as a defeat, but really as a new venture and a high attainment.

The word "sleep" is used by Jesus and the New Testament writers as a symbol of death. Last night at midnight I went to sleep, and I was dead to the world until seven this morning, but I was living and gaining new strength and new power for the duties of this day. So our loved ones lie down in death and become unconscious to the things that hinder and hurt and harm, to live on in new power and strength in a life more beautiful beyond the grave.

So one lies down in death, but they are living, they are living with an intensity and power, and with the strength to render service in the life beyond the world, more marvelous than anything they have ever done here on earth.

A few years ago a friend moved New York State to Los Angeles. He did not bring his wife and children with him, but left them in the east so that the children could continue without interruption in school. A few months later, he showed me a beautiful bungalow which he had built and had furnished with all the conveniences and comforts that love and good taste and wealth could supply. He said, "I am going to New York to bring my wife and children and bring them out here to be with me in this beautiful home."

Friends, it was in language just as simple and plain as that, that Jesus said, "In My Father's house are many mansions; I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

Yes, our friend, our loved one, has gone on just a little while ahead of us, to be where things are better, as he said, than here, but we are looking forward with that bright and happy anticipation that in the dawning of the eternal morning, we know we shall meet him again, and abide with him and our Lord forever and forever.

Let us pray:

Almighty God, our Eternal Father, we thank Thee for the words of Scripture that bring to us the revelation of Thy life and truth, and the assurance that death is only a transition, that even as Christ Himself was made perfect through suffering, so somehow, someday there must come to us the sorrow, the heartache, the burdens, the light and truth that out of these things there shall be worked for us a far more exceeding weight of character, for if Christ's character was made perfect through suffering, so must we have that element in our own lives if we would be Christlike in spirit and character, and above all to be of service to our fellowmen who suffer.

We thank Thee for the life and for the record of Will Rogers; we thank Thee for the mighty power of his spirit in the world today. We thank

These that all over the world, men and women are recalling his kindly spirit, his lovable nature, his sacrificial spirit, his willingness to serve others. As we think upon these things, may we find the inspiration to go and make our own lives more beautiful and more unselfish and more lovable.

We pray for Thy richest benediction upon the home from which he has gone. May Thy Spirit make real the presence of Christ, comfort, cheer, inspire, instruct and give strength to meet this hour and all the days to come, for Lord, Thou can't do for us far more than we can do for each other, though we love one another.

And so may Thy Spirit abide in the home, and may He bring comfort and cheer, not only to this group of friends who are gathered here, but the thousands of others that have stopped to remember the kindly philosopher, from the loving heart of one who ever sought to make the world a happier and brighter place in which to live.

And may the peace of God which passeth all understanding, keep the minds and hearts of this dear wife and the children and sisters and loved ones and friends, that we may find Thy grace sufficient for us in this hour of need, for we ask it for Christ's sake. Amen.

And now may the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, the comfort and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit abide with us all forever. Amen.
