My dear Mr Carter:-

There is no end to your kindness. The snapshots have just arrived. They shall, of course, remain as a treasure in my own little sanctum removed from the rude eyes of the world and of the Kill-joys.

I hear from my friend, Sir William Wiseman, that he was royally entertained by you around the Christmas season.

In the gloom of a London February I often find myself

Thinking of the glorious sun of Texas, and the hospitality of the sons of that happy state.

Cours, with many thanks.
