Amon G. Carter,
Ft. Worth, Texas.

Dear Carter:

I tried night before last to get you on the phone. I renewed my call several times yesterday. The phone people finally reported that you were out of town, but I did not believe it. I just presumed that you had just such a secretary as I had when I was Governor, who reported "out of the office", or "out of town", when it was necessary for me to do some work. Since I read your fine statement in this morning's paper, it proved conclusively to me that my opinion was correct, and that you were busy yesterday morning, making a few, mild observations in regard to several different things.

My purpose in trying to get you on the phone was merely to say that you were not appointed originally on the board of the Technological College with the thought that you would at this time tender your resignation. I was practically sure that you would not do such a foolish thing, and yet I would have been acting contrary to my natural impulses if I had not made an effort to get in connection with you to say that you should "stay put".

I assure you that I read with much interest, your two communications published in the morning papers. These are interesting times - new headlines every morning. On with the battle!

Your friend,

P. M. Neff
