Dear Mr. Carter:

I have been following with a great deal of interest the free advertising that you have been getting on account of your run-in with your lady Governor. I thought you might like to know one of the fellows who had not said anything about what you regale your friends with when in your office, or the token of friendship that you hand them when they leave, the nature of which is not altogether disclosed on the outside of the gift. I did not say anything to the Governor about what you did to me, so look around among the rest of your friends and find out the fellow who gave you away. I should judge from the papers that you are coming out very nicely in the controversy.

I remain, with best regards,

Sincerely yours,

A handwritten signature in brown ink, appearing to read "R. T. Buckley". The signature is written in a cursive style with a long horizontal flourish at the end.
