

THE INDIAN

(TO WILL ROGERS, AND ALL OF "TRIBAL BLOOD.")

Truth and tolerance he was shown and taught;
Honor to himself and people brought:
Erect in stature, straight in speech and thot.

In tune with nature and her magic arts,
No doubt nor fear his proven faith assails:
Direct he speaks and acts, and truth imparts
In deeds, in throbbing songs, and thrilling tales.
And I am proud of blood which proves me kin-
Noble my brother — in, and 'neath the skin!

R. Hand.
July 1935

19 © 35
By Rados

From Wide World Photo
Edward Langley

Between Will Rogers and R. Hand, both of Indian heritage, there was complete understanding. "The Indian" was to have been a surprise to "Will and Wiley" on their return from the north.