Realization of aspirations possible through House

By Virginia Stroud

While visiting various parts of the TCU campus over the past several months, I have heard students voicing numerous opinions.

Some of the areas being discussed are increased parking, a 24-hour study area and the alcohol policy.

Other opinions concerned better lighting on campus, increased library hours, bookstore prices, student participation on the Board of Trustees and student center renovation.

As I listened to the thoughts expressed by the students, I realized that these were not just thoughts, but they were also wants, needs and aspirations. The feelings expressed by the many TCU students represent the needs and feelings of a majority of the students, both on and off campus.

People often do not realize that their wants and needs can become reality.

The question is how they might become reality. Answer: through the TCU House of Student Representatives.

Ever so often, that same old question comes up, "What does the House do?"

One might get an answer to that question by looking more closely at the House. Perhaps some misconceptions can be cleared up.

The House of Student Representatives has six standing committees. These committees are Elections and Regulations, Permanent Improvements, Academic Affairs, Finance, Student Affairs and University Relations.

Each committee has a very capable and hard-working chairperson who is ready, and willing, to listen to any input from the student body of TCU.

The Elections and Regulations Committee is chaired by Bill Senter. The committee is in charge of all university elections.

Town student elections were recently held. All but one slot was filled.

The committee is also in charge of House documents and the student handbook. This semester, the members will be considering House reapportionment.

The Permanent Improvements Committee is chaired by Michelle Daniel. This committee is responsible for researching and formulating projects for permanent improvement of the university—and the student body.

It works with an annual budget of approximately $13,000. The newly finished Reed-Sadler Mall and Student Activities Office are projects that have come out of this committee. This spring, the committee will be working to get better lighting on campus.

The Academic Affairs Committee is mainly responsible for student-faculty relations and legislation with academic matters. It is currently working on designing better and more effective teacher evaluations and approving the Committee for Academic Affairs and Honors. This committee is chaired by Desiree Buehler.

The Student Affairs Committee oversees university services like the food service, housing and student life policies. One problem they will be dealing with this semester is the parking situation at TCU. It is chaired by Walter Kieffer.

The Finance Committee regulates the flow of money coming from the House. Recently, the committee has helped certain organizations like the TCU Concert Chorus and the TCU College Bowl. It is chaired by the House treasurer Jill Robertson.

The University Relations Committee is chaired by Ray Miller. This committee communicates with all student organizations. It also corresponds with other universities. It is a very important link with the administration and faculty of TCU. This committee is looking into the possibility of having a student on the Board of Trustees.

It is plain to see that the questions asked in the past do have answers. Some of these answers come from these six committees. The committees are established for the students of TCU, and can get results.

Nothing will happen if you do not make your needs and wants known to these very important branches of the student government.

Again, you might ask: "What does the House do?"

An answer to that question can only be given if you take a look around and see for yourself. Remember, it is vital that your wishes be made known so something can be done to fulfill your dreams and aspirations for a better TCU.

Salvadoran action reminiscent of Nam

By Sherry Hamilton

With the still bitter memories of Vietnam haunting us, should we dare risk getting involved in another battle over human rights?

Some governmental officials think we should not.

During El Salvador's civil war, President Reagan is committed to backing the regime of President Jose Napoleon Duarte. President Duarte is said to be a protector of human rights.

But how can this be when there have been reports that governmental troops had killed about 13,000 unarmed civilians last month in the northern province of Morazan?

Incidentally, Col. Domingo Monterrosa, commander of Atlacatl Battalion, freely admits that it is impossible for his troops to distinguish between civilians and guerrillas.

Reporters taken on the tour of the area by guerrillas reported seeing scores of charred skulls and skeletons. They also talked to survivors who positively identified Atlacatl soldiers as the murderers—describing in detail their distinctive arrival by helicopters.

Due to a guerrilla attack on El Salvador's air force, which is armed by the United States, a State Department spokesman said that the administration was "reassessing assistance needs on an urgent basis."

Congress will also be asked to approve an additional $100 million in aid this year.

The attack was uncannily reminiscent of the Viet Cong attack on the American base at Pleiku in 1965. That led to a major increase in aid to South Vietnam.

Incidentally, President Reagan has approved $26 million of military aid for the Salvadoran junta.

Along with this aid, he is ready to replace the destroyed helicopters—probably by drawing an extra $55 million in previously authorized funds. About $25 million of this money would be used to replace the aircraft that was destroyed last week in a guerrilla raid.

Congress will also be asked to approve an additional $100 million in aid this year to El Salvador.

Fortunately, Reagan has agreed not to send aid in "extreme" circumstances.

In reference to the Atlacatl Battalion, a State Department official said, "They are the best. If anyone can win a military victory down there, those guys can."

If the United States should be drawn into another war, let's make sure that it does not turn out to be a replay of Vietnam.

Central Americans fear Marxist threats

By Jose Roberto Dutriz

The Central American region of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama is now threatening to fall into Marxism. Its 23.2 million inhabitants fear Marxist intervention, especially in tiny, prosperous El Salvador, Central America's most densely populated country.

Since the late '60s and early '70s, El Salvador has been, in relative terms, the most productive and industrialized nation of the area.

But after the fall of Somoza's government in Nicaragua during the 1979 revolution, the scene has changed in Central America.

The establishment of a totalitarian regime in Nicaragua is now threatening Central America, especially El Salvador.

In El Salvador, leftist insurgents burn the major crops and army patrols meet ambushes on mountain roads. Automatic rifles chatter and bombs destroy private and public property. Since 1979, political violence has ended 32,000 lives.

The leftist groups in El Salvador have a primary goal: to weaken the armed forces and the economy in order to gain power. Central America cannot afford the takeover of another totalitarian regime by a democratic reformist government.

El Salvador's government is trying hard to show the world that there is another way to transform society without extremist ideologies or violence.

Rebels in El Salvador know that the U.S.-backed government is an obstacle to achieving the master plan drawn, and supervised, by Fidel Castro in 1978. The plan is to take over the weak, vulnerable governments of Central America by 1985, creating a hostile threat to the United States.

The firm determination of the Reagan administration to "draw the line on El Salvador" against Soviet, Cuban and Nicaraguan intervention is weakening the extremists' plans. Castro's adventurist "games" have, since 1979, cost over 65,000 lives to political violence in El Salvador, Nicaragua and Guatemala.

Clearly, Central Americans are afraid of what is happening in El Salvador, since the decisive battle is being fought here.

Heroic Salvadorans have demonstrated that what they want is a non-violent environment where they can work and bring prosperity back to the nation. The U.S.-backed government, led by Jose Napoleon Duarte, is trying to make non-Marxist reforms at all odds. But it is hard to fight heavily armed guerrillas who want other alternatives.

The political development and direction in Central America depends, significantly, on the future of El Salvador. Leftist insurgents know this and have launched an orchestrated, international campaign against the credibility of Duarte's government. They want the United States to fail because they have aided what they (leftists) call "a repressive, fascist, authoritarian regime."

Wisely, the Reagan administration has not changed its policy toward El Salvador. This has been criticized by several liberal newspapers and several "human rights experts" in Congress. The United States can still draw the final line in El Salvador against communist expansion.

The Light Side

UNION, III. (AP)—The incandescent creations of Thomas Alva Edison live on through Larry Donley.

Thursday was Edison's 135th birthday and it was a special occasion for Donley, who has a huge collection of Edison memorabilia.

Donley, once an auto mechanic, bought his first old Edison phonograph 25 years ago for $5. Eight years ago, he and his sons opened an antique shop here where they collect, repair and sometimes sell Edison collectables.

Edison's company produced as many as 6,000 "talking machines" a week at his West Orange, N.J., plant during its peak years, 1904 and 1905.

Nearly 2 million machines were manufactured there before it closed in 1929.

Donley has 600 machines, half of them Edison's—160 in perfect working condition.

"The more expensive machines are in demand and I have several in the $5,000 bracket. A Victor talking machine with a wood horn, for instance, was in the $500 category three years ago, and now it's $3,000."

Donley said he has three Edison "Opera" cylinder-playing machines much prized for their technical superiority and the beauty of their oak or mahogany horns. They were produced between 1911 and 1913 and a decade ago were worth $600 in mint condition. Now such machines sell from $3,500 to $4,500 regardless of condition.

Donley does not sell any of his machines unless he has three of a kind. "I like to keep them in pairs because I have two sons," he said.

BOSTON (AP)—If you plan on coming down with lovesickness this Valentine's Day, you're a person after A.L. Ritterson's heart.

Ritterson, a doctor at the University of Rochester Medical Center, wrote in a light-hearted letter in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine that lovesickness may indeed be a physical ailment.

The doctor's theory is that over the centuries, people came down with brucellosis—which can be transmitted to man by animals and also known as undulant fever—around Valentine's Day and the symptoms of aching, weakness, insomnia, depression and fever came to be passed off as lovesickness.

"The whole thing got mixed together and entered our folklore and consciousness," he wrote. "Even the now widely popular belly dance symbolizes the undulant character of the love-linked infection."

'Reds' gets 12 Oscar nominations

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Reds, the saga of an American in revolutionary Russia, and On Golden Pond, a bittersweet drama of a man facing old age, scored top honors Thursday in the 54th annual Academy Award nominations.

Reds, with 12 nominations, and On Golden Pond, with 10, were selected for best picture of the year along with Atlantic City, Chariots of Fire and Raiders of the Lost Ark.

Paul Newman was selected for his sixth Academy nomination for his role as the media victim in Absence of Malice. The other nominees for best actor were Warren Beatty, Reds; Henry Fonda, On Golden Pond; Burt Lancaster, Atlantic City, and Dudley Moore, Arthur.

Katharine Hepburn, already a winner of three Oscars, collected her 12th nomination for her performance as the indulgent wife in On Golden Pond. The other nominees for best actress: Diane Keaton, Reds; Marsha Mason, Only When I Laugh; Susan Sarandon, Atlantic City; and Meryl Streep, The French Lieutenant's Woman.

The nominations for the 54th annual awards by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were announced at its Beverly Hills headquarters by president Fay Kanin and actor Lloyd Bridges.

Fonda, who was nominated for an Oscar for the 1940 film The Grapes of Wrath, is recovering at home from a two-month hospital stay during which doctors examined him and altered his heart medication.

The awards will be presented at the Los Angeles Music Center on March 29 with Johnny Carson as master of ceremonies.

The nominations were made by the academy's 3,800 voters, who all vote for best picture. Otherwise, members of each field nominate their own—writers vote for writing achievements, actors for acting, etc.

Four honorary awards were announced Tuesday night by the academy Board of Governors. Actress Barbara Stanwyck, who has never won an Oscar for an individual performance, will receive one for her distinguished career.

Danny Kaye receives the Jean Hersholt humanitarian award, while the Irving Thalberg award for consistent quality of producing goes to Albert R. Cobby Broccoli, producer of James Bond films.

The Gordon Sawyer award for technological contributions will be presented for the first time to veteran cinematographer Joseph Walker.

The nomination announcements were on schedule despite a mail foul-up that forced postponement of voting deadlines.

Five days after the accounting firm of Price-Waterhouse mailed the ballots, it discovered that the postal service had lost a bundle. The voting deadline was pushed from Jan. 29 to Feb. 1.

The deadline for writers also was extended to Feb. 4 because of a printing error that classified Wolfen as an original screenplay. It was an adaptation.

'Juno and the Paycock' staged next week

TCU's theater department is staging "Juno and the Paycock" next week as its first production this semester.

Sean O'Casey wrote the play about an Irish family's conflict during the 1922 civil war. Vanity and violence dominate the play. The political plot is Ireland fighting itself, while the divided family parallels Ireland.

Gaylan Collier, a professor in the theater department, is directing the show. Mike Hendrix plays the paycock, Capt. John Boyle. Juno is Boyle's wife, played by Debbie Billow. Jay Fraley plays their son Johnny. Others in the cast are Ray Hanson, Lisa Priddy, Tonya Bryant, Michael Wehrli, Joy Mounts, Chris Bradley, Kenny Green and Bill Volz. Joe Godwin is the production stage manager.

Show times will be 8:15 p.m. Monday through Feb. 20. The Feb. 21 matinee will be at 2:15 p.m. Tickets are $4 for general admission, $2 for senior citizens and students. Reservations may be made by calling 921-7626.

String quartet presenting TCU concert

The Glinka String Quartet will perform at TCU Feb. 19 during its debut tour of the United States.

The quartet was originally formed in the Soviet Union in 1967 and won the International Quartet Competition in Belgium in 1969. The group disbanded in 1978 when its members immigrated to the Netherlands, but two of the original members re-formed the group soon after.

Tickets cost $5 for general admission and $3 for students. They may be reserved by calling the music office at 921-7602.

New exhibit highlights new art form

Mailart will be featured beginning Monday in the new student center gallery exhibit.

Mailart includes letters, postcards, packages, stamps, collages, photocopies, newsletters, magazines or catalogs. The mailart movement is relatively new, having emerged only in the last 25 years.

The opening reception is Monday at 4:30 p.m. The exhibit will continue through March 5.

Bozarth leads women's golf team

By ARMANDO VILLAFRANCA
Staff Writer

Marci Bozarth is special to TCU. Not only is she currently leading the TCU women's golf team to a possible national championship, Bozarth is also a third-generation TCU student.

Back in the fall of 1927, soon after TCU had established itself as a major university, Annabesth Baker was beginning her freshman year. Exactly 25 years later, her son Mickey also enrolled at the university.

Mickey Bozarth met fellow TCU student Myrna Medart in his sophomore year and they soon married. A quarter of a century later, their son Mackey strolled across the same campus that his father, mother and grandmother had once attended.

While Mackey was pursuing a college education, his younger sister Marci was winning golf tournaments for her high school in Lampasas, Texas.

Although she was two years away from going to college, the younger Bozarth was strongly considering attending TCU.

"I had been around TCU all my life, attending games and just being around campus," Bozarth said. "I felt a part of TCU, even before I was a freshman here."

"The fact that I had been on campus so many times influenced me a lot. I had learned so much about TCU from my brother and father. Both are die-hard TCU fans - my dad can't stand to see them lose."

Bozarth said that her parents never expressed their feelings about where they wanted her to go, and so she didn't feel any pressure to go to TCU.

"When you're a kid you think about where you will go to college, and I wanted to attend TCU."

"When I was a senior in high school, I knew that I was going to go to either TCU or Texas A&M. There was a good golf team at A&M, and all the players were friends that I met while playing in high school," she said.

Fortunately for TCU, Bozarth decided against A&M, and now she is an important part of one of the best women's golf teams in the nation.

Bozarth was the first TCU golfer to win the Texas AIAW championship in Division I competition last spring. In last year's national AIAW finals, she finished two shots behind the winner.

Her 75.4 average this year is but a distant dream to many amateur golfers pounding the courses. Bozarth has won nine tournaments in the past 18 months, and has not finished lower than eighth place in all but one tournament this fall.

"Marci is someone everybody can depend on to shoot a good game. She sets a standard and pace that the other girls try to keep up with," said golf coach Fred Warren. "She's the number one player on probably the best team on the nation. That's not a position anyone can hold easily, especially on this team."

"When you sit back and look at the whole thing, it's kind of a privilege to be a part of such a great program," Bozarth said. "Even though golf is an individual sport everyone here plays as a team. "We help each other with our game, and we're all very open with each other. Another good thing about playing with good golfers is that the competition helps your game. It brings out the best in you."

Preparing for the spring tournaments is what Bozarth devotes most of her time to. She spends one to five hours every day, playing 18 holes or working on a part of her game that needs polishing.

Bozarth is also committed to her studies. The junior general business major maintains a 3.6 GPA.

"We didn't feel like we had a very good fall. We just didn't have any good tournaments as a team," Bozarth said. "I think we'll do better as the spring comes."

The women's golf team will be traveling to Lubbock April 25-27 for the Texas AIAW championship. The big tournaments, however, are the NCAA championship (March 26-29), and the National AIAW championship (June 16-19).

"We are one of the top three teams in the nation and Marci will probably win the nationals this year," Warren said.

Bozarth's father, who was a two-year letterman in his three years on the TCU team, taught his daughter to play when she was 10 years old. Marci's "bugging" her father to teach her the game may someday pay off with success on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

"It all depends on how I play. If I continue to be successful, I'll go out and join the tour after graduation. If not, I'll hold off for a year and then try again," she said.

"She has a definite possibility of having a future on the LPGA tour because she has a good style and a good game," Warren said. "At this point right now she could make a living on the tour, but of course she still has another year of eligibility left," he added.

Bozarth doesn't pattern herself after any woman golfer. She does, however, admire Beth Daniel and Nancy Lopez-Melton. And there is the possibility that Bozarth might one day be playing alongside these women.

And just maybe she will be reminiscing about the year she played on the TCU women's golf team that won the national championship.
