Fort Worth, Tarrant County, Texas.

Dear Sallie:

Your letter was received Saturday evening on my way over to Acton. I felt much like turning my head homeward, but as I had disappointed the people there once, I did not feel willing to do it again. I hope the sickness of the children is nothing serious.

I shall be at home Saturday by noon if not Friday night. I wish you were out here. Old Bro. Thorpe has run wild on his prices here, and the place of which I spoke in my last can not now be had for any reasonable price. I could get several very pretty building sites, if I were able to build, and I can rent a rather indifferent place. I do not like to rent for a short time and then move again.

I send the cough receipt. Do not be frightened about the children; if it is necessary I shall stay at home with them.
Though I can not well be spared from School at this juncture.

Tell Jessie I staid the other night when there was a pretty little girl, and she kissed me. That she had a doll without any arms.

Tell the smart boy he must not cry
for papa; he will be home soon,
and will then take him riding.

Luc went to town this evening with his papa, and got some candy. He would not give any of it to anyone.
Said he saw a mule and a rabbit.
He goes to school every day.

A good night - kiss to all,

Aff.
