Members of club are soaring high

By Gary Hicks

Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

Members of one TCU organization find it easy to wing their way through college.

These students make up the ranks of the TCU Flying Club, and according to their sponsor, find fun, fellowship and monetary reward in their membership.

Serge Matulich, an associate professor of accounting, serves as faculty sponsor of the club. According to Matulich, the flying club was begun in the late 1950s but soon disbanded due to low membership. Five years ago the club was reactivated and has been gaining members ever since.

Besides flying, Matulich said, the group goes on field trips to area airports, control towers and to aircraft manufacturers such as General Dynamics. He added, however, that members are not required to participate in every activity, including flying.

"Many of our members go flying with another member and then decide to get their pilot's license," Matulich said.

Some people join the club due to a general interest in aviation, not out of a desire to become pilots, Matulich said. Once in, however, he said many members catch the flying bug.

"They find out that anybody can learn how to fly—they just have to put out the effort and the money," Matulich said flying is not inexpensive.

"Flying is not a cheap hobby, but belonging to the flying club makes it less costly.

"One of the big benefits of the club is that members get discounts on instructions and plane rentals," Matulich said. "To get a pilot's license can cost a person from $1,500 to $3,000. With membership in the flying club it is likely to be closer to $1,500."

Matulich said these discounts are made possible by the Tarrant Aero Association. The TAA is an association of college flying clubs in the metroplex area and provides aircraft and instructions.

"People can belong to TAA only if they are members of a college flying club," Matulich said.

Some members of the club have aspirations to become corporate or commercial pilots. Karen Campbell, a sophomore pre-med major, is the club's chief organizer. Although planning a career in medicine, Campbell said she wants to go as far as she can in flying.

"They say that race car drivers have gasoline in their blood—well, pilots have jet fuel in theirs," Campbell said.

Membership dues are set at $10 per year, Campbell said, and all interested students, faculty and staff are invited to join the club.

Student to push for subwalkway

By Steve Welch

Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

If one TCU student has his way, students will no longer walk across University Drive to get to class—they'll walk under it.

Brian Lawe, chairperson of the Permanent Improvements Committee of the House of Student Representatives, has been pushing for an underground walkway to aid students in safely crossing the congested street.

Lawe said he will probably formally propose the project to the Permanent Improvements Committee in November, when there will be a "lull" in major projects around campus.

The walkway, which a Fort Worth city engineer said would cost $500,000 to construct, is opposed by Vice Chancellor for Student and Administrative Services Howard Wible, Lawe said.

Lawe's plan includes moving the existing crosswalk traffic signal to a position in front of Reed Hall "for cripples or whoever wants to use it," he said.

Lawe said Robert E. Haubold, director of the Physical Plant, was "all for" the walkway, if funding could be obtained.

However, Lawe said both the city engineer and Wible believe the plan would be too costly and would go unused by the majority of TCU students.

"Most of the students I've talked to say they're against it," Lawe said. "The reason everybody gives is that no one would use it, and it's a waste of money," he said.

But Lawe said everyone also believed that no one would use the traffic lights in front of Sadler Hall. He said the city opposed the lights, due partly to what it saw as student apathy. But students use the crosswalk, Lawe said, and they would use the walkway.

"It's a good idea and a safe idea," Lawe said. "To me (University Drive) is a horrible kind of place."

Lawe said the crosswalk is dangerous because of the heavy traffic on University Drive and the fact that many students ignore the traffic signal and "jump right out in front of cars."

Lawe said he will probably propose that the Permanent Improvements Committee spend $3,000 to $4,000 to have plans drawn up for the walkway. He said he hopes the remainder of the funds would be donated by interested alumni.

Similar walkways at Texas A&M University and other colleges are widely used by students, Lawe said.

Death squads threaten U.S. aid to El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP)—Henry A. Kissinger warned Salvadoran officials that human rights abuses must be curbed if they want continued U.S. aid for the war against leftist rebels.

With violence by rightist death squads increasing, the former secretary of state told political leaders Wednesday that Americans must not be forced to "choose between security and human rights" in deciding whether the government deserved further support in the civil war.

Elsewhere in Central America, unidentified attackers fired grenades at the opposition newspaper La Prensa in Managua, Nicaragua, and Guatemalan newspapers defied a government order by printing a guerrilla statement as demanded for the release of a kidnapped newspaper executive.

Kissinger heads a bipartisan fact-finding commission on a six-country tour of Central America to make recommendations on U.S. policy in the region.

"It is imperative to defend these principles of democracy and human rights, to preserve and expand them. And as the American people cannot be asked to choose between the two, the Salvadoran people must not be asked to make such a choice," he told reporters after meeting with President Alvaro Magana and other political leaders.

A congressional source at the meetings said the commission members were especially critical of the Salvadoran judicial system and labeled their meetings with military leaders "a disappointment."

"They are laying it on pretty thick. They are saying, 'Look, you guys, you had better straighten this out because we can't sell it in America,'" the source said.

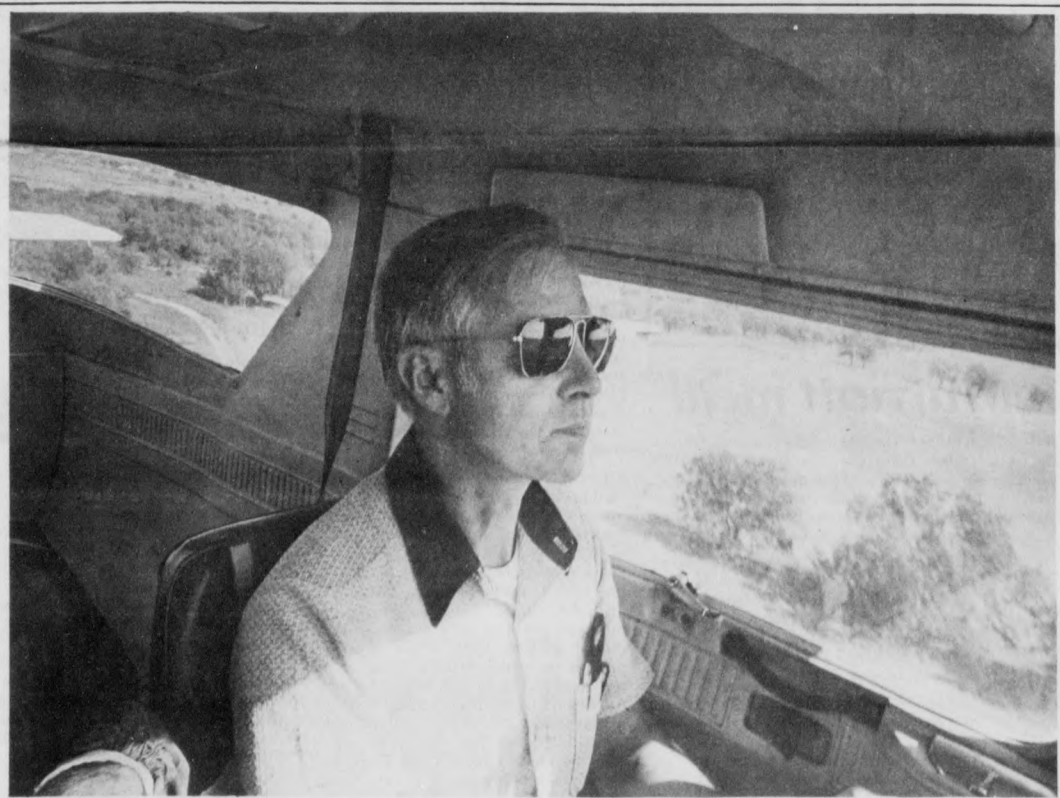

Two rightist death squads have intensified activities lately, setting off bombs and kidnapping and killing leftists and suspected leftists. The death squads are widely believed to work closely with military and security forces under the guise of fighting communism.

At a meeting later Wednesday, Salvadoran military leaders asked the commission for more arms, House majority leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said.

In Nicaragua, a night watchman at La Prensa in Managua said unidentified attackers Wednesday night fired two rocket-propelled grenades at its offices, causing minor damage. No one was hurt in the attack.

In Guatemala, radio and television stations Wednesday joined newspapers in defying a government order not to print or broadcast a statement as demanded by a communist guerrilla group as a condition for the release of Pedro Julio Garcia, director of the conservative Prensa Libre newspaper.

Government spokesman Col. Pablo Nuila called the publication and broadcasts of the Guatemalan Workers Party statement a "violation of the law." He said the government would prosecute, although he did not elaborate.

Israel finance minister quits amid economic crisis

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Finance Minister Yoram Aridor Thursday proposed linking the Israeli economy to the U.S. dollar, but resigned from the government hours later in the face of stiff opposition.

Aridor's short-lived economic proposal was announced in the midst of a severe economic crisis and set off a political storm. Opposition politicians as well as some of Aridor's Cabinet colleagues claimed that it spelled the end of Israeli independence.

Aridor came out of an emergency Cabinet meeting and announced his resignation to reporters. It was to take effect 48 hours later, according to law.

Aridor said it was clear his plan would fail in the Cabinet "and I saw no possibility of contributing any more. . . . I have concluded that I must resign from the Cabinet," Aridor said.

Wyoming Republican considered for Watt's job

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan's political advisers are sounding out Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., about becoming the new interior secretary, Republican sources say.

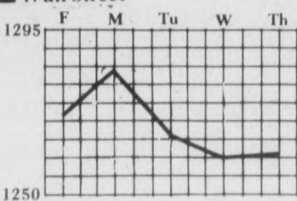

Cheney refused to comment on the report Wednesday, saying, "There is nothing I can say at this time."

Cheney's name began circulating as a possible replacement for James Watt, who resigned Sunday, as former Sen. Clifford Hansen, another Wyoming Republican, said he did not want to be considered.

Cheney was chief of the White House staff under President Ford.

Others being considered were Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M.; Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, who served as Watt's top aide for two years; former House Minority Leader John Rhodes, R-Ariz.; and J.J. Simmons III, Watt's deputy at the Interior Department.

Interior Department halts oil and gas lotteries

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Interior Department has suspended its oil and gas lotteries after allegations that taxpayers have been cheated out of $50 million to $100 million because of government ineptitude and oil company secrecy.

Department officials abruptly announced late Wednesday that they were suspending the lotteries—which attract 2.5 million applicants annually—for at least six weeks while reforms are implemented.

Critics allege that the government sold off oil leases in Wyoming at bargain basement prices—unaware that the land contained large quantities of oil and gas.

State seeks owners of unclaimed $7 million

AUSTIN (AP)—The state of Texas has more than $7 million it wants to put back in the wallets of more than 20,000 people and organizations, including the Internal Revenue Service and bankrupt Braniff Airways.

The money is a collection of dormant bank accounts and other funds left inactive for seven years. State law requires that the accounts be turned over to the state treasurer, who must try to find the owners.

Treasurer Ann Richards, in an unprecedented $200,000 effort, will on Sunday publish a 20-page list of owners of unclaimed accounts of $50 or more.

The list will be in 35 Texas newspapers and will be distributed to 600 libraries and all tax assessor-collector offices in the state.

"People need to know that they can get their money back if it's been turned over to the treasury—no matter how much time has passed," Richards said Wednesday.

The list includes businesses and thousands of individuals.

Convocation song:

Church/state not issue

Six TCU religion professors said in a recent letter to the administration that the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" should not be sung at the 1983 convocation because—for one thing—it is a violation of the statute mandating separation of church and state.

It is not a church and state issue, however. The convocation—the opening of an academic year—of a private, church-related university is not a state event. These teachers may assume that the scheduled presence of Vice President George Bush makes it a state function, but it does not. Convocation is still a TCU ceremony, and will still be held on the TCU campus.

Also, TCU is not a state institution, it is a private institution. That gives TCU certain rights that public universities don't have, including the right to promote religion.

The teachers say that the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" offends Jews, Moslems and other religious groups attending TCU because it mentions Christ. If mention of Christ is offensive, then a Christian, church-related private school has the right—perhaps even the responsibility—to offend in this way.

Separation of religion from the state is one thing. It is even preferable to keep subjective religious viewpoints out of the classroom at a church-related school in order to protect academic freedom. But in a ceremony, that private institution should be free to promote its religion in so subtle and harmless a way as the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

This practice does not hamper the religious freedom of members of minority religions.

The teachers also said the song is militaristic. They are undoubtedly right. And because it is so militaristic, it was not the most appropriate first choice for the convocation. "America, the Beautiful"—now on the convocation agenda instead—is a better choice in this respect.

But people should not force on TCU the religious neutrality that is characterized by our government. That is what TCU is about. We are a Christian school. We encourage religious freedom, but do not want to shun our own beliefs in our ceremonies and creeds. The right to promote those beliefs is one of those protected in the First Amendment—the same part of the Bill of Rights that outlines separation of church and state.

Incorrect terms frustrating for journalists

By Mari Rapela Larson

Every day, we get letters about particular "articles" that have appeared on this page. Journalists learn the proper names for everything in the newspaper, and just assume that everyone else learns it along with them. It is frustrating to have someone call a column an article, an article a column, or a column an editorial.

This, then, will explain what to call the various parts of a newspaper. A public service from your neighborhood campus newspaper.

These words that you are reading make up what journalists call a column. A column is not an editorial, because it is signed and represents the opinion of only the person who wrote it. A column can be like an editorial and discuss issues, or it can be funny or be nonsense. A column is what the writer wants to make it.

To the left of this column is today's editorial. This editorial represents staff consensus. That is, the majority of the staff agrees with what the editorial says. Others on the staff disagree, but the editorial isn't signed because it represents the opinion of most of the newspaper staff.

Also on this page are the letters to the editor. These are letters from the readers to express their own points of view. The staff may or may not agree with the opinions expressed in the letters, but they are the opinions of the writers and are signed by them. On the rest of the pages of the paper, articles appear. Articles are written by reporters who are supposed to write the facts of the story objectively, without bias. There are no articles on the editorial pages, and there are no editorials on the other pages of the paper.

Sometimes people call us up and tell us that "the article on Page 2 is biased." Well, the columns and editorials on Page 2 are supposed to be biased. They reflect opinions, which are naturally biased, if they weren't biased, there would be no need for an editorial page.

Larson is a senior religion major.

From the Readers

Mad about parking

I look forward to reading the Skiff every day and I think that the majority of your articles are well written and informative. The Skiff not only helps the average student keep in touch with major national and world events, but also local and TCU events.

Along this line, I felt compelled to write this letter to applaud your editorial about the parking issues. Last week when I read the article about the faculty petition requesting more parking (they recommended the conversion of the 30-minute and visitor spots near the Student Center), I was slightly angry. But I was glad to read in Tuesday's Skiff that your opinion coincided with mine in every respect. And after talking to other students, I know your editorial expressed many points of view also.

I can understand that the faculty feel the need for more parking and it is obvious that it is necessary. But let's not forget about the students. Finding a parking spot anywhere on TCU's campus can be a major hassle. As a result, students are late to classes or else they get a ticket for parking "illegally," as defined by a TCU police officer. Another prevalent problem with the shortage of student parking spots is the danger it presents to women coming home late at night and having to park light years away from their dorms. While a TCU police officer is writing a ticket for a car with its left wheel in the fire lane, some poor woman could be on the verge of being attacked on the other side of campus.

On the faculty's part, I think it is a somewhat selfish idea to eliminate the visitor/30-minute parking spots in order to have more room for faculty places. As the Skiff stated, it is enough of a problem to find a spot near the Student Center just to run in to the snack bar or mailboxes. If the faculty wants to eliminate these spots for students, I hope they can provide an alternate place to park near the Student Center. Students should at least be allowed the luxury of a few convenient spots.

I like the Skiff's idea of building a two or three level parking garage for both students and faculty, although I would hope that it could be built in such a way that it wouldn't be unsightly to TCU's campus. But this idea, or one similar to it, would solve the problem of all involved. After all, we pay some pretty big bucks to TCU, so shouldn't we get the same, if not more, consideration over the faculty, who get paid by TCU?

TCU has so much going for it academically, socially and in many other areas. Since the university works so hard to excel in some fields, it is realized that at times some minor problems may be overlooked. But these minor problems are important to a few thousand students—and a few hundred faculty also.

TCU has so much to offer, how about offering us a better parking solution?

Movie is silly

When is Hollywood going to learn that being silly is not funny without a strong plot to make significant the inane antics that are only foolishness by themselves? A comic bit is only funny in the context of an interesting story.

"Mr. Mom" is one movie that fails to make this connection. Watching Michael Keaton battling various appliances, making a fool of himself in a supermarket and being seduced by the neighborhood nymphomaniac is not funny because these things are isolated by the lack of a strong plot. Like a punch line without a joke, "Mr. Mom" is nothing but incoherent silliness that is just not funny.

Whether or not Bill Hanna saw the film, his review of this less than benign movie is most appropriate. He is not a lone crusader; there are many of us who practice the ancient art of thinking. The fact that Milton Croft has found no others who agree with Hanna is only indicative of the intellectual level of Croft's associates. Hanna's review of "Mr. Mom" is not murder, but justifiable homicide.

ID card worth more than Marriott meal

By Bill Hardey

The TCU ID card is like spun gold, but everyone treats his like woven lead.

Why is it that so many people have trouble holding on to their ID? Before they go anywhere, IDdroppers will say things like, "Where's my ID?" or "Have you seen my ID?" or "Do you know what I did with my ID?" This is only when they go to get their football tickets. At meal time, the ID changes into the Meal Card. It must be magic—black, or otherwise.

But back to my original question. There are a lot of potentially bad things associated with the ID/Meal Card. Is it the picture that turns people off ("Man, throw that thing away. It doesn't look a thing like me.") Or the food bought with it (Uh, oh, I think I'm going to vom. . .)? I know. It's the football tickets ("Some guy behind me spilled beer down my back during the fourth quarter.")

Is it really so difficult for students to keep their IDs in a purse or wallet? I don't even carry a purse, and I always have my ID with me. Some people just never learn, I guess.

Losing your ID is even against university policy. If you read the back of your ID (what, you didn't know it had a back?), you will see that it says, "This is a permanent TCU identification card to be retained during association or attendance at TCU." What that says is this: You will hang on to this card, because we won't give you another one. But they always wimp out and make up another one for you, so you can't take the threat seriously.

I wonder what qualifies "association. . . at TCU." If you buy a season basketball ticket, do you get an ID?

And what about the last statement on the back, which tells us that, "This card must be surrendered when leaving TCU or upon demand of a University Official." Just what constitutes a "University Official"? Bill Tucker counts. Jim Wacker does not.

I can see someone coming up to me and saying, "Where are your papers, young man?" Yeah, I can really see that happening.

And if I don't happen to have it with me, for whatever reason, I can even envision this happening: "Well, sir, I don't have it with me right now. If you'd like, I could go back to my room and get it. Is that OK?" Uh huh.

"This card provides the bearer," the back says, "with convenient access to University Facilities and Services." First question: why did they capitalize "facilities," and "services?" You don't capitalize all the nouns in English, only in German. It's an honest mistake. The languages do look an awful lot alike. I, for one, am always getting the words Krieg and war mixed up.

Second question: what's so convenient about having to have your ID, if you must ransack your room to find it?

Third question: if there is convenient access, what about inconvenient access? They could line up a bunch of people with baseball bats, and make you run the gauntlet. Hey, that would create quite a few work/study jobs. I think I'll tell Bill Tucker about it. I can see it now. . .

"Hey, Bill, what's happening?"
"Not much, Bill, what's happening with you?"

"Well, Bill, I have this great new idea."

"Tell me about it, Bill."

"OK, Bill, it's like this. We hire a bunch of work/study kids to beat people who don't have their IDs."

"Sounds radical, Bill, but I think it might work. Of course you know, Bill, that we strive for internal improvements."

"What do you mean, Bill?"

"What I mean, Bill, is that I need to make sure you're really a part of TCU. I need to see your ID, Bill."

Oh, uh, well, maybe not.

Mysterious habits of women explained

By Alice Heal

Half of you (us) have already read about yourselves, and the other half of you have read about the opposite sex. We're going to do it again, but this time we'll turn it around. It's Gentlemen's Day on the old Opinion Page.

First I'd like to explain the females' mystifying habits to Bill Hardey, not because I think they need it, but because this column won't be long enough if I don't.

We spend all that money to buy fancy shoes that are terribly uncomfortable because fashion, which is dictated by our traditionally male society, says we should. Men have expected women to wear high-heeled shoes, which put incredible pressure on the small bones of the foot and lead to lower back problems, for centuries. It is a well-known fact that men like to watch women who wiggle when they walk.

(There's even a song or two about it.) It is also a well-known fact that the higher the heel the bigger the wiggle.

So while there's no one behind us holding a gun, tacky as it sounds, there may be a guy behind us holding a wallet. Be honest. Would you take a woman out to a nice place where they have real waiters if she was wearing her Nikes?

While we're at that restaurant and we ask the waiter for directions to the ladies' room, our goal is not to relieve bladder pressure. We're just remembering what our mothers taught us and wash our hands before we eat. By the way, it is also a great way to avoid talking to a really boring date. By the time we get back to the table, dinner is almost there, and Mom also taught us not to talk with our mouths full. Making a pit stop at the theater allows us to flip our shoes off for a minute, make sure there's not a piece of spinach stuck to our front teeth (you might do the same) and it also can kill a lot of time. Then, by the time we get home, we really do have to go.

Well, I could enumerate the annoying traits of men, like the way they ask us for "just a swallow" of whatever we're drinking (even if it's in a blue can or a cute cup) because they didn't have the foresight to bring their own, or the way they assume they'll be invited in for dessert after springing for a cheeseburger at McDonald's and a TCU movie, or how they feed us lines we've heard 10,000 times before and expect us to swoon from their sincerity.

But I won't do that because even though they are quite exasperating, it seems that their useful functions outnumber their flaws and we do find them convenient to have around.

Braniff contacts 350 pilots

DALLAS (AP)—Notices have been mailed to 350 former Braniff International pilots, offering them jobs under a plan backed by the Hyatt Corp. to get the grounded carrier in the air again.

Hyatt, a Chicago-based hotel chain, has gained approval from a federal bankruptcy court to invest $70 million in a plan to have Braniff flying again by next March.

Plans call for 2,000 former Braniff employees to be offered jobs on the basis of seniority.

Braniff is still working on hiring notices for flight attendants and does not know when they will be mailed, company officials said Wednesday.

Notices will be mailed to another 350 pilots to form a backup pool should some of the first 350 decline or delay their acceptance of the Hyatt offer, airline spokesmen said.

Protest aimed at U.S.

BREMERHAVEN, West Germany (AP)—Lines of riot police Thursday kept about 2,500 demonstrators a half mile away from a U.S. military base at the start of a three-day protest against American nuclear missiles in Europe.

All three entrance roads to the Carl Schurz Base were blocked by police about 800 yards from the base, and no protesters were allowed to approach the installation, police said.

Hundreds of policemen, carrying shields and backed by armored personnel carriers, blocked roads leading to the barracks. Police sources said some 6,000 police had been brought in from surrounding areas in case of trouble.

"There have been no incidents reported. Everyone seems to be in a peaceful frame of mind," said a police spokesman at midmorning.

The organizers had said they would try to block entrances to the base and stage a protest at a nearby port dock used by the U.S. Army to bring equipment into West Germany.

"We didn't expect the police to turn out in such force. We didn't come here to start trouble. It's crazy to have so many cops here," said a 23-year-old protester who refused to give his name and wore a black ski mask to conceal his identity.

About 1,500 demonstrators gathered on a road leading to the front gate, while another 1,000 protesters took up positions on roads leading to the two other gates.

Jazz band cuts album

By Becky Jutton
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

The TCU Jazz Ensemble recently produced an album called The Wide-Mouthed Frog, which is now being sold on the market.

The album, directed by Curt Wilson, head of jazz studies at TCU, is dedicated to Michael Winesanker, who served on the TCU music faculty for 37 years (1946-1983) as a professor of musicology and chairman of the department of music from 1956 to 1981.

The album offers a variety of music for the listener, including jazz, swing, ballads and rock.

It was called The Wide-Mouthed Frog in honor of the TCU Horned Frogs. It's also named after a song on the album.

Wilson said the purpose for making the album was to give lab experience to his students.

"The best test and training for a student is straight under the microphone," he said.

He said the album also was produced to recruit students. This is the best tool for recruitment, he said.

The Wide-Mouthed Frog, the third album produced by the music department since 1976, cost approximately $5,000 to make. Although the album is being sold at the TCU Bookstore and at Record Town for $5, its recording was a non-profit venture, Wilson said.

Albums produced by the music department are largely paid for by the department fund, he said. Although a major portion is paid by TCU, the band department also raises money for recording costs by playing engagements throughout the year.

Students operate weather station

By Peggy Wyrick
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

A $79,000 grant given to TCU's radio-TV-film department has made it possible for students to operate a 24-hour weather radio station.

The grant for the station, which began broadcasting Oct. 1, was given by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The NOAA is a division of the U.S. Department of Commerce, which oversees the National Weather Service.

With the aid of the federal government, TCU will be responsible for manning the station—which broadcasts aviation, farming, marine and general weather reports—until Sept. 30, 1984. The reports are broadcast to a 13-county area, which includes Dallas and Fort Worth.

Of the 140 National Weather Service stations across the nation, only five operate with university student staffs. Before TCU's involvement, the Fort Worth weather facility was operated by students at the University of Texas at Arlington.

The station is run by nine employees—eight of whom are either TCU students or graduates. The staff was recruited through advertising within the radio-TV-film department and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, said Joel Persky, department chairman.

Project coordinator for the station is TCU alumnus Mike Reeder, who graduated in 1982 with a degree in radio-TV-film.

Reeder's staff includes two full-time and six part-time announcers. Prior to the project, announcers took part in intensive training sessions to acquaint them with the equipment used and emergency procedures followed during weather disasters.

"It is a marvelous opportunity for students to use the skills they have learned in the classroom in a real broadcast situation," Persky said. "The students will be able to put broadcast experience on their resumes."

Committee reviews TCU core requirements

By Erin O'Donnell
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

Vice Chancellor William H. Koehler recently initiated the formation of a committee to review TCU's core curriculum requirements.

The committee consists of 17 members representing all colleges and schools of the university, including each of the three divisions of AddRan College of Arts and Sciences. The members, chosen by Koehler to participate on the committee, elected English professor Betsy Colquitt as chairman.

Presently, the purpose of the committee is to examine the core requirements of the university and find out how TCU students have fulfilled them in recent years.

Reports of studies on undergraduate education, such as those produced by the Carnegie Foundation, have been useful in measuring TCU's standards against those of other universities, Colquitt said.

These findings present practices and problems of undergraduate education, and "help us to get a feeling for the situation here in terms of the core requirements and how they are fulfilled," Colquitt said.

Once the committee has explored the situation and suggested possibilities of changes, the administrators, faculty and students will be able to express opinions.

From there, the committee will formulate recommendations as to what the core requirements should be and how the changes will be implemented. The university's administration must then agree on the proposals.

Colquitt said the changes could be listed in the 1984-85 undergraduate catalog. This means that students admitted to TCU during the 1985-86 academic year would be directly affected by the changes.

"I think such changes are important to consider because lots of people are affected by the core," Colquitt said.

She added that it is the responsibility of the educational institution to direct its students, and she said she believes that this can be effectively carried out with a sense of purpose through the core.

Soccer team is playing .500 so far this year

By Angie Pugh
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

The TCU soccer team racked up two more ties last weekend, and lost one Wednesday, which brings their record to a near perfect .500.

The team was on the road in Houston over the weekend, playing the Houston Baptist Huskies and the Rice Owls. On Wednesday, the Frogs were at home, and lost 3-1. Their record is now four wins, four losses and five ties.

TCU played the Huskies to a 2-2 draw on Saturday. The Huskies swept the TCU tournament held over parents' weekend, and were ranked No. 1 in their conference last year.

The Huskies scored first, making the goal 12 minutes into the game on a penalty kick. Then five minutes later they popped in another one to make the score 2-0 at the half.

The Frogs got their opponent's attention 11 minutes into the second half. Kevin Schock put in his second goal of the season to bring the team to within one goal of the Huskies.

John Regan fired in the tying goal 14 minutes into the second half. The score remained tied for the rest of regulation playing time, forcing the game into two 10 minute overtimes, with neither side breaking the deadlock.

"It was a pretty physical game. We showed a lot of character. We dominated overtime; we could have won," said TCU Head Coach Dave Rubinson.

On Sunday, TCU played the Rice Owls to a 1-1 draw.

The TCU loss on Wednesday came at the hands of Hardin-Simmons University, 3-1. TCU scored 20 minutes into the game, when Greg Womack made a head shot that just cleared the inside right post to make the score 1-0.

The Cowboys tied it up 13 minutes later on a free kick by Scott Dillon, who was assisted by Randy Allen.

In the second half, Hardin-Simmons scored two unanswered goals. The first was scored when Samson Waldermarian took the ball from 12 yards out, pivoted, and made the shot to take the lead.

Seven minutes later Waldermarian was ejected from the game, forcing the Cowboys to play one man down for the rest of the game.

Dillon put in the final score of the game when he put a direct kick into the right corner of the goal, around a wall of defending TCU players.

"In the first half we looked good and we dominated the game until they got their first goal," Rubinson said. "I think we were worn-out from the weekend; we played very flat."

The Frogs will take on North Texas State University this Sunday at home. Game time is at 2 p.m.

Frogs looking for home game win

By Alan Gray
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

Even though he has his first win, Coach Wacker is still chasing one goal to complete his "new beginning" for TCU football. He is still searching for that elusive first home game win.

The Frogs take on the University of Mississippi this Saturday. They are hoping to stay on the rebound after thrashing Rice, 34-3, and rack up another win.

The Ole Miss Rebels look to be on hard times this season, as they hold a one win and five loss record. But their one victory of the season came against Arkansas.

The Rebels squeaked by the Hogs, 13-10. And while they have a dismal record, they have had to play eighth-ranked Georgia, eleventh-ranked Alabama and a tough Southern Mississippi team.

Last year Ole Miss put it on the Frogs, 27-9, at Oxford, Mississippi. Coach Billy Brewer led his team to a 4-7 season, in his ninth year as head coach.

The Ole Miss offense is led by quarterback Kent Austin. He has already topped the 1,000-yard mark in passing, hitting 50 percent of what he puts into the air.

"We have our work cut out for us because they are a very talented football team. When that quarterback Austin gets hot, he can burn you," Wacker said.

Receivers Jamie Holder and Timmy Moffett are Austin's favorite targets. Holder has caught passes for 257 yards and one touchdown. Moffett has 292 yards and averages 14 yards a catch.

Tailback Buford McGee leads the Ole Miss running attack. He has 377 yards on the ground and is the team's leading scorer with four touchdowns.

"Ole Miss will be a tough, good game. They are certain to have something because they beat a pretty good Arkansas team," said TCU quarterback Anthony Sciaraffa.

Thomas Hubbard and Andre Townsend anchor the Mississippi defense. Hubbard has a total of 64 tackles and Townsend leads the team with four quarterback sacks.

The Frog defense has been plagued with injuries so far this season. Starting tackle L. B. Washington will not play against Ole Miss, due to a knee injury he received during the Rice game.

With Washington out of the game and Mike Taliferro off the team, TCU will be starting three freshmen on the defensive line.

Defensive end Chris Williams is out for four weeks due to the separation of some ribs he received during the Arkansas game. Freshman Bill Tommaney, who has been moved from tight end, will start at the defensive end position Saturday.

"He (Tommaney) runs good, and has a great punch off the ball," Wacker said. "Coach Brown (defensive line) has been begging us to take a look at him."

The Frogs will offense this week is coming off their best performance so far this season. Sciaraffa hit eight of 17 passes for 198 yards, and hit receiver Greg Arterberry for a touchdown.

Sciaraffa's completion percentage (.582) is the best in the Southwest Conference, and he is ranked 24th in the NCAA passing efficiency ratings.

Receiver James Maness caught four of Sciaraffa's passes, for a total of 121 yards against Rice. He moved into seventh place for TCU career pass receiving yardage, with a total of 45 receptions for 1,091 yards.

The victory over Rice brought about the realization of two goals for Wacker, winning a game and winning a game on the road.

If the TCU offense plays as well as it did against Rice, and the defense can put the stops on Austin and company, Wacker may just catch up with the elusive home game win.

Dupree returns?

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Sophomore tailback Marcus Dupree, missing for three days, says he's returning to the University of Oklahoma, but it's not known when.

Dupree, the highly-touted product of Philadelphia, Miss., was dropped from the squad Wednesday. He has not been with the team since Oklahoma's 28-16 loss to Texas last weekend in Dallas.

"As of now, he's off the team," said Sooner Coach Barry Switzer. "The only way he could come back is if they (teammates) want him, and I don't think they do."

Late Wednesday night, assistant coach Scott Hill said he talked with Dupree by telephone from Mississippi, and "he assured me he's coming back, but he didn't give any specific time.

"He said he couldn't talk long. He was concerned that he'd been kicked off the team, and I told him that Coach Switzer had said he'd leave it up to a vote of the team," Hill said.
