Fort Worth, Texas, August 1st 1910.

Mr. A. G. Carter,
New Elms Hotel,
Excelsior Springs, Mo.

My dear Carter:-

I received the certificates this morning from you and thank you for your promptness.

I also read a letter written to you by Mr. Wortham, and feeling the same sort of interest in your health as expressed in his letter, but at the same time disclaiming any intention of meddling in your affairs, I nevertheless wish to express my approval of the suggestions he makes in his letter to you. I have no confidence in Battle Creek and in "sawdust remedies", and fully agree that you should go somewhere where competent medical experts can tell you what your trouble is. Once known, you can then seek the proper remedies.

I also want to reiterate what Mr. Wortham says about your worrying over business affairs here at home. I trust you will not think that I am disposed to be facetious when I remark to you that the paper is getting along quite as well, seemingly, as when you were present, which on its face does not seem to be complimentary, and which I explain by the statement that your temporary absence does not affect it because you had your matters so thoroughly systematized that they will be, at least for a short time, practically automatic.

We are all very much interested in your recovery, and I offer that as our excuse for meddling (if this be meddling) in a matter that is peculiarly your own personal right to determine.

With my very best wishes for your early and complete recovery, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

Paul Waples
